Public dis-service channels

The BBC's decision to become a completely free-to-air TV channel should have been the start of a new future for digital satellite.

It seemed that, in the wake of Freeview's successful launch, Britain's mainstream broadcasters might have the maturity and confidence in digital TV to break away from Sky on satellite as well.

The BBC's move was handled clumsily, but it has been nothing compared with the selfish conduct of ITV, Channel 4, and Five. Hundreds of thousands of British TV viewers rely on the BBC's free Solus cards to pick up the major broadcasters, yet the commercial channels have refused to take over the Solus operation when the BBC stops using encryption and doesn't need it any more.

Sky is currently switching off all of its first-generation viewing cards, so the Solus cards will be de-activated by the end of this year. With no plans announced to follow the BBC into free-to-air broadcasting, ITV, Channel 4, and Five will effectively become subscription channels on satellite.

They will argue that viewers can always pick them up by a terrestrial aerial – in analogue or digital. Yet Freeview coverage is still far from comprehensive, and sending viewers back to analogue is no way to achieve digital switch-over.

If the major commercial channels will not honour the spirit of public service, and the Independet Television Commision ignores the matter as it has, then the government must show its mettle and amend the Communication Bill with a clause that will provide instant satisfaction to ordinary viewers, not big business or media luvvies.

Legacy of Sky's cheap installations

One unexpected effect of the BBC's shift to Astra 2D was that thousands of British viewers in coastal areas lost the BBC's channels. Astra 2D's signals are marginally weaker because of its tight footprint, but with the small Sky dishes this is enough to show up a sloppy dish alignment.

So thousands of viewers were left with a £65 bill for a second installer's visit, as well as losing the channels for several days. Sky predictably blamed the problem on the BBC – treating viewers like pawns in its dispute with the BBC instead of shouldering the re-alignment costs and buying itself some much-needed credit with the public ■

Free BBC on hold

But early move to Astra 2D causes chaos

The BBC has delayed its free-to-air satellite plans for six weeks while the broadcasting regulator studies the implications of the change.

All eight BBC channels are now set to drop their encryption on July 14, by which time the Independent Television Commission (ITC) should have ruled on the corporation's row with Sky (see panel).

The BBC surprised everyone by moving some of its channels to Astra 2D at the end of May instead of simultaneously with its free-to-air relaunch. The change caught unawares thousands of overseas viewers who had yet to invest in larger dishes, and caused problems for thousands of British viewers who had been given shoddy installations.

The roughly aligned dishes were unable to pick up Astra 2D, and installers across the country had a busy Spring Bank Holiday week.

The BBC has leased six transponders in total, and was due to complete its move from Astra 2A during June. The extra transponders will be used for more regional services and extra interactive opportunities.

The BBC hopes to develop new software allowing viewers to pick a 'default' regional variation for 101, but it won't be ready for a year at least. But new regional variations will arrive this autumn, and will be situated alongside existing regions in the 960s.

SOLUS CARDS ABANDONED

ITV, Channel 4 and Five announced that they would be abandoning free-to-air viewers by not picking up the BBC's Solus card operation.

The three channels will remain encrypted on satellite for at least the next 12 months, Sky is currently replacing all of its viewing cards.

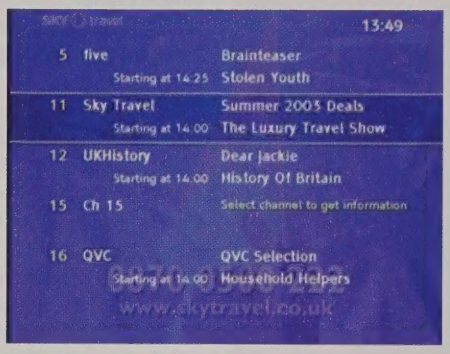
Original Sky Digital viewing cards are being turned off as they are replaced, and Solus cards will be turned off by the end of the year.

Unless someone takes over the Solus operation – which the BBC no longer needs – thousands of homes will lose the three terrestrial channels.

The BBC and Sky are at odds over the BBC's EPG numbers after it goes free-to-air. The BBC wants to stay at 101 and 102; Sky wants to move them to the low 200s.

■ Sky says there will be a clash with RTE viewers in Ireland, where RTE One and Two have the top slots. If there's no conditional access technology to control the BBC's positions, Digibox users in Ireland may not get the right channels, or their boxes could crash. The BBC says there will be no problem as every Digibox user in Ireland has a viewing card that will ensure they get the right channels.

The new frequencies on Astra 2D so far are: 10.773GHz/H, 10.803GHz/H, 10.847GHz/V (all SR22000, FEC 5/6).



Freeview guide for Xmas

A 24-hour programme listing will be available for Freeview converters by the end of the year.

The BBC is testing an interactive application using MHEG-5 software which will provide a full day's listings for all 30 terrestrial digital channels.

The guide will be upgraded to a seven-day schedule with features for personal video recorders like the Pace Twin by the end of 2004.

The BBC could have launched an EPG using basic DVB formats earlier, but MHEG-5 makes more efficient use of the scarce terrestrial digital bandwidth.

■ The Freeview postcode database has been relaunched with a 100m resolution.

The new map should enable potential Freeview homes to calculate their reception more accurately. You can find it at: www.freeview.co.uk, or by calling 08708 80 99 80.

Tivo goes back to basics

Personal video recording pioneer Tivo hopes to relaunch itself with a free bare-bones version of its subscription listings service.

Tivo Basic will have just three days of listings from which recordings can be programmed, manual repeat recordings and live TV pause. But it will not include the Season Pass, Wish List and search features, or the two weeks of listings available in the £10/month subscription service. The Basic service will be packaged with PVRs from licensees like Toshiba and Sony, with the first US product from Toshiba due this year, but there's no word on UK products.

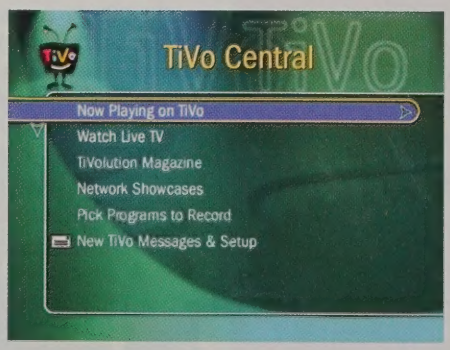
Users will also be able to enjoy a free trial of the full Tivo service and upgrade to a subscription if they like it.

■ The next generation of the technology behind Sky Plus has been revealed by developer NDS – XTV-Multi.

It will allow set-top boxes with large hard discs to feed multiple TVs with different signals, mixing video, audio and still photo storage on the same device.

XTV-Multi devices will probably use wireless connections, and all of NDS's customers (Sky is the biggest) have shown an interest in greater capacity storage.

But devices using the new technology won't be ready for everyday use for at least 18 months.

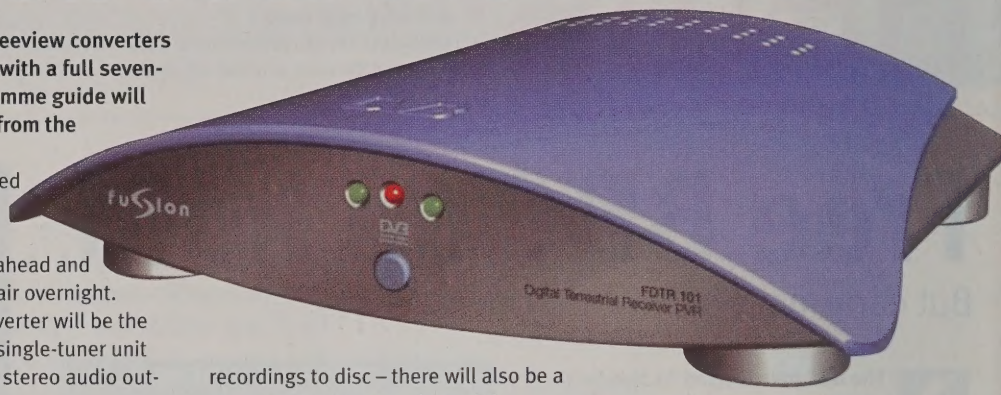


IN BRIEF

- The digital terrestrial multiplex operated by SDN is doubling its power output across the country. Multiplex A, which carries Five, S4C, QVC, S4C2, TNG, TV Travel Shop and Bid-up.TV, will complete its upgrade programme by the end of July
- Living TV will have to ensure that paranormal shows such as Crossing Over and 6ixth Sense are clearly announced as entertainment in future, after the ITC decided viewers weren't given enough detail on sceptical opinions of the shows' attempts to contact the dead
- About 700,000 Freeview converters have been sold in the UK since the service was launched in October last year. More than a million boxes have been shipped to retailers and sales are estimated to be around 100,000 a month
- Pioneering TV-by-phone service Kingston Interactive Television could be closed unless this year's £3.9million loss is reversed and the 7,000-subscriber audience improves. Parent outfit Kingston Communications hopes to find new investors or sell KIT as a going concern
- Greece and Cyprus have their own purpose-built satellite. Hellas Sat 2 was sent into orbit by an Atlas 5 from Cape Canaveral to orbit at 39°E. Its main mission will be coverage of the 2004 Summer Olympics from Athens, but it will also provide direct broadcast TV over Europe, the Middle East and South Africa
- Sony's first personal video recorder will be based on Playstation 2. The PSX launches in Europe next year, and will combine a PS2 with a TV tuner, hard disc drive, Memory Stick slot and broadband connectivity. It's not known if Sony's licensing deal with Tivo will feature in the PSX

Fusion sees the future

The first Freeview converters and IDTVs with a full seven-day programme guide will arrive this summer from the Fusion brand.



Fusion has licensed the Multi Guide EPG for its converters, which looks a week ahead and is updated over-the-air overnight.

Fusion's first converter will be the sub-£100 FDT100, a single-tuner unit with twin Scarts and stereo audio outputs.

This autumn should see a twin tuner PVR, the FDTR101, which has a 40MB hard disc variable bit rate recording and a DVD-style video library browser.

The FDTRR100 will add a DVD-R recorder to the PVR specification, enabling users to archive their favourite recordings to disc – there will also be a cheaper DVD player-only model.

Fusion is also planning a 14in and a widescreen 28in Freeview IDTV, both of which will have a 30-second instant replay.

And Fusion is keeping an eye on the BBC's move to free satellite by releasing details of free-to-air, common interface, and integrated PVR satellite receivers.

The company, run by Pace founder Barry Rubery, is using Setpal tuner software and the manufacturing expertise of Turkish electronics giant Beko.

High definition for everyone

The challenge of showing today's TV programmes on tomorrow's high-definition TVs has been solved by BBC researchers.

The prototype 'upconverter' was shown to What Satellite & Digital TV at the BBC's Kingswood Warren laboratories.

It can turn standard 625-line PAL TV into high-definition 1080-line pictures in real time.

The pictures looked smooth and pixel-perfect on 40in plasma displays, although there was less fine detail than on a genuine HDTV recording.

The technology could be used by channels to broadcast in high-definition, or even built into displays to turn any signal into a high-definition picture.

Ironically, it was designed to convert archive recordings in an early HDTV format to the latest 1080i HDTV standard, but turned out to have many uses.

Eight is great

Pure Digital now has a 7.1 version of its budget ZXR surround speaker system in the shops.

The ZXR-750 comprises seven satellite speakers and a 28W RMS subwoofer giving a total output of 77W RMS and makes use of Pure's SurFE (Surround Sound Field Enhancement) technology to deliver eight-channel playback from 5.1 soundtracks.

It is compatible with Dolby Digital, DTS, and Pro-Logic audio from sources with onboard decoders such as DVD players and PC sound cards.

Pure (formerly Videologic) uses ConnX.1 optimisation technology to give the best audio reproduction when switching between sources such as TV or a DVD player.

The ZXR-750 system is available now priced at £129.99.

Rival Saudis take to Hot Bird

The Islah channel is available on 12.149GHz/V polarisation, SR 27500, FEC 3/4.

It is financed by Saudi expatriates who want to replace the Al-Saud family's rule with a democratically elected government in the country, whose population numbers some 24million.

These expat groups include the Movement for Islamic Reform in Arabia, which said: 'This will be more dangerous to the Saudi royal family than all the bombs of bin Laden.'

News Bunny's back

Cult cable channel Live TV is set to return in a wave of new channel launches on satellite and terrestrial.

The reborn Live TV will feature archive footage of tabloid TV such as Topless Darts, the weather in Norwegian, and the infamous News Bunny. New barrel-scraping TV ideas will also be produced for Live, which originally ran from 1995 to 1999 and is scheduled to return to Sky Digital later this year.

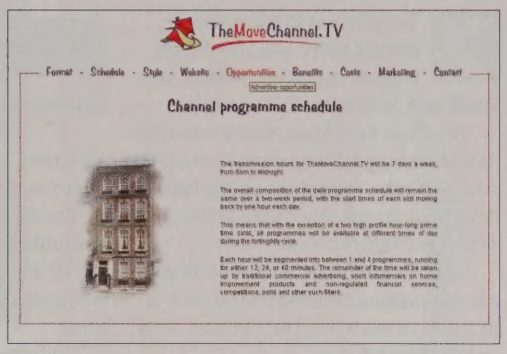
ITV's plans to merge Carlton with Granada could see Granada Plus transformed into ITV Gold, building an ITV brand with ITV2 and the ITV News Channel.

ACTV will target an under-served British minority – the African and Caribbean community – on Sky Digital in June.

The 24-hour channel will show news, sports, music and general entertainment tailored to people with roots in both Africa and the Caribbean.

The first music channel aimed at world and fusion music launched in May – EMMA TV. Funded by the Ethnic Multicultural Media Academy, EMMA TV will run from 9pm-3am, when Black Entertainment Network TV (BEN) is off-air.

The thriving property market gets its first TV presence this autumn when The Move Channel launches on Sky Digital. Running from 9am-12am, Move will cycle through properties in London and the Home Counties, with a website at www.themovechannel.tv



European film channel Europa Europa is seeking EC funding to launch on Sky Digital, and Chinese TV plans a news channel and kids' service alongside CCTV-4.

IN BRIEF

- High-definition evangelist Alfacam has recorded four major European events in HD – the G8 Summit in Evian, the Denmark vs Norway European Cup qualifier, the first concert at the St Petersburg 300th Anniversary, and a Two Tenors concert near Rome's Colosseum. Euro1080, Europe's first HDTV channel, launches on January 1, 2004
- Using its own launcher, India has put an experimental communications satellite in geostationary orbit. The 1,825 kilo GSAT-2, was lofted aboard the GSLV-D2 from Sriharikota spaceport, near Madras, to an orbit at 48°E. It was the second successful test of India's heavy launcher
- Entertainment channel YouTV has been fined £40,000 by the ITC for running shows which broke advertising and sponsorship rules, despite being fined £20,000 for breaking similar rules in March. Breaches included misleading adverts and commercial endorsements by presenters
- The European Parliament is pushing for legislation that would force member states to give 'listed event' status to major sporting competitions, which would have to have free-to-air coverage. Only six European nations have listed events, and the parliament wants to secure free access to events like the World Cup and Olympics
- Racing channel Attheraces could face a new hurdle of renegotiating a £307million deal with top racecourses after the Office of Fair Trading said the contract was anti-competitive. The OFT said the 49 courses should not have worked collectively selling their rights to the Sky/Channel 4-backed channel for 10 years

Panel beaters

Toshiba has added two new models to its Stasia range of flat panel LCD TVs.

The 14in 14VL43 (£700) and 20in 20VL43 (£1.300) are Nicam sets with a 400:1 contrast ratio and a wide viewing angle of 160°. Both have a resolution of 640 x 480, and a new black coating helps to prevent light reflecting back off the screen. Connections are an RGB-capable Scart, along with component video, S-video, and and a composite video input.

Toshiba will also be a launching a 26in 16:9 LCD TV later this year. The 26WL36 (£2,500) has a resolution of 1024 x 680 and a contrast ratio of 600:1 and features two component video inputs, two RGB Scart inputs and a 15-pin PC input.

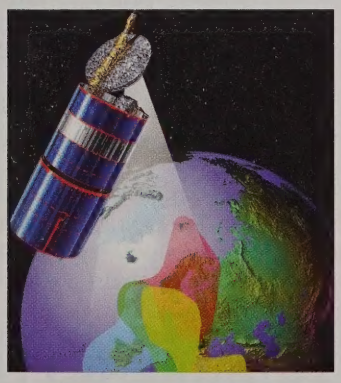
British broadband satellite moves closer

Internet giant Tiscali will use Eutelsat's new e-Bird satellite for a one-way internet service to the UK when it goes into orbit this summer.

Tiscali's hybrid satellite-and-phone service will launch initially on W3 at 7°E for mainland Europe.

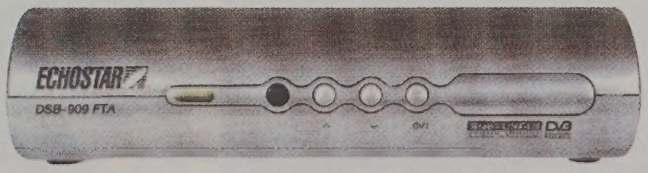
E-Bird will launch aboard an Ariane 5 rocket this summer, and will be placed at 33°E, where it can be picked up using a Sky minidish with a second LNB.

Tiscali will offer three tiers with different download capacity and content: residential at around £17 per month, club class at about £34 per month and business at around £85 per month. Competing providers like Everywhere Broadband have already signed up to e-Bird, alongside MPEG4 video and push internet services on Eutelsat's Opensky network.



Twinkle, twinkle, Echostar

Squeezing the gubbins of a digital satellite receiver into smaller boxes seems to be a pastime for electronic designers, as Echostar's latest receiver shows.



The DSB-909 FTA is just 20cm wide, 6cm tall and 16cm deep, but its sleekly curved exterior houses everything, including a power supply.

The receiver can store 4,000 channels over 100 satellites and 1,300 transponders, with multiple favourites lists.

It supports DiSEqC 1.2 motorised mounts and USALS automatic satellite location, with a single Scart output, and Echonav menus for dynamic control and channel navigation.

Echostar also has a forthcoming terrestrial digital receiver, the T-707, and a new compact satellite receiver with 36V positioner, the D-2400IP.

IN BRIEF

- Freeview's first interactive games channel, Free2Play, has launched on channel 53 in May with a darts game and a Big Brother Quiz, plus a magazine area with news, jokes and quizzes. The channel plans to add games over the summer
- Fox News is being investigated by the ITC after complaints about biased reporting. News operators licensed by the ITC must show an overall balance of opinions, although individual shows can be partial – but many commentators feel Fox's jingoistic reporting may not meet this criterion
- West Berlin's Cold War TV channel, SFB, has been merged into Brandenburg regional broadcaster ORB. The familiar logos on Astra 1 in analogue and digital have been replaced by RBB Brandenburg and RBB Berlin. SFB was famous for providing a voice to dissidents in East Berlin
- Simply TV has gone into receivership and shut three of its seven channels. The editorial-based channels Simply Nostalgia, Simply Asian, and Simply Shopping Plus have been closed, but the outfit hopes to sell its shopping-only channels
- Some 28 Equatorial nations were on alert in May when Italy's BeppoSAX astronomy satellite plunged into the atmosphere after a year out of control. About 360kg of the four-year-old satellite were expected to survive re-entry, which eventually happened safely over the Pacific Ocean
- The head of news channel Al Jazeera has stepped down after criticism that the channel had been infiltrated by Saddam Hussein's agents. The Sunday Times said Mohammed Jassem al-Ali had agreed to favour Iraq in its war coverage. Both al-Ali and Al Jazeera denied the reports

The write stuff

Toshiba has made a heavy-weight entry into the digital recording market with its first combined hard disc/DVD recorder.

The £700 RD-XS30 combines a 60GB hard drive with a DVD recorder, enabling you to transfer recordings on the hard drive onto rewriteable DVD-RAM and write-once DVD-R discs.

It has five different quality settings and is capable of storing a maximum of 78 hours of recordings on the hard drive on the lowest setting.

Its high-speed dubbing option means you can copy recordings from the hard disc at up to 12 times the normal recording speed, and a library system memorises the contents of up to 999 discs.

The RD-XS30 also has some PVR functionality with the ability to pause live TV and to watch programmes from the beginning before recording has finished.

You can also record onto the hard drive while watching a DVD and there's a picture-in-picture mode for keeping an eye on the TV while watching a recording. Timed recordings can be scheduled and Videoplus is also supported.

Other notable features are a 32-event timer (with a channel-changing 'satellite monitor' option), Videoplus and a Dolby Digital 5.1 decoder. Connections include two Scarts, an aerial input, and an optical digital audio output.

Get your freak on

Sci-Fi is looking for viewers' weirdest home videos to show as part of the third year of its Headfk season.

For the past two years, Headfk has been polluting the airwaves with the most bizarre, surreal, and disturbed films and videos the world has to offer.

Now here's your chance to be part of the madness; Sci-Fi is looking for home made videos that can be played alongside the main attractions.

Send your VHS tapes and an SAE to: Mr Headfk, Universal Studio Networks, PO Box 4276, London W1A 7YE.

If you want to know the sort of thing Sci-Fi is looking for, you can see some of last year's submissions at www.scifi.uk.com

Sky profits up 96 per cent

Sky is less than three million subscribers away from its seven million target – with six months to reach the goal.

The satellite giant recorded 6,712,000 subscribers in the UK and Ireland at the end of March, after adding 150,000 in the usually quiet spring months.

The company's profits rose by a staggering 96 per cent, to £254million, from £18million this time last year.

This was partly due to price rises in January bringing the annual revenue from each subscriber to £364 – £13 higher than at the end of last year, and also due to a 7 per cent increase in revenues from interactive TV.

Extra Digiboxes with Sky Subscriptions are increasingly popular, with 137,000 now in use (a rise of 17 per cent). Sky Plus has found 21 per cent more users since Christmas, with the PVR now signed up in 79,000 homes.

Funking up Freeview

An antenna developed for Holland's digital TV system could be just the solution that portable TV Freeview viewers are seeking.

The Funke DSG200 digital signal collector is an active indoor antenna which is designed to amplify digital terrestrial TV signals.

It is suitable for both the 16QAM and 64QAM signal modes which are used in the United Kingdon, and it has a super-flexible coaxial cable for easy handling.

The DSG200 can be used in passive mode or with a 5V power supply to amplify weak signals.

The antenna was designed for the Digitenne terrestrial pay-TV service, which hopes to avoid the reception problems that doomed ITV Digital.

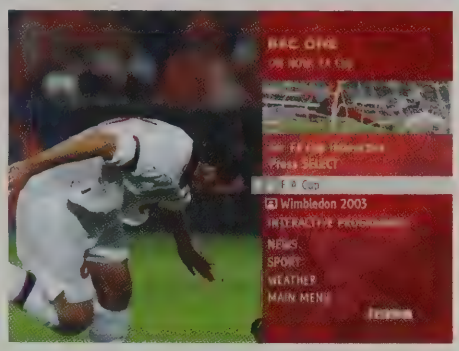
Digital text comes of age

Interactive text is becoming the norm as the BBC upgrades its service and ITV and Five prepare for serious red button action.



The BBC's digital text service will be relaunched this summer with a new opening 'bridge' that combines access to news and information with enhanced TV.

Each BBC channel will have its own tailored bridge – from the corporate ID of BBC1 to the colourful fun of Cbeebies.

Text and video information on the various, news, weather, and entertainment pages will be combined in simpler, easier-to-use pages, and there will be a full A-Z guide of interactive pages.

The BBC will also launch its first onscreen messaging services, enabling satellite and cable viewers to reach BBC presenters through their remote controls.

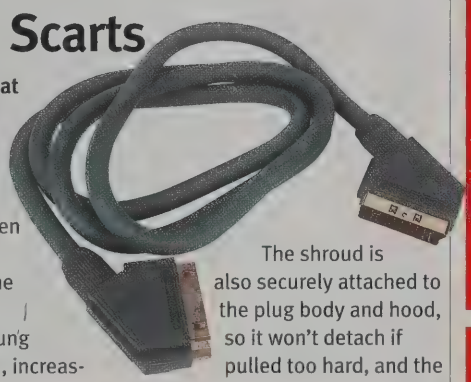
The new services will roll on to satellite through the summer, extending to Freeview in the autumn, and digital cable by the end of the year.

Accessing the new interface should be the same on every digital platform, although there will be small differences in the contents.

Five has announced ambitious plans for a 24/7 digital text services, and for enhanced TV behind up to half of its schedules. The interactive TV will be available first to satellite viewers, including voting, vox-pops and games, and chat.

GFI locks in Scarts

The safest Scart cable What Satellite & Digital TV has ever seen is on the market from GFI.



The Secure Scart takes the locking Scarts we've seen to their next level with a design that should stand the toughest tests.

The cable uses four sprung latches in the metal shroud, increasing the force needed to disrupt the connection, which can be lost if it rotates as little as three degrees.

The shroud is also securely attached to the plug body and hood, so it won't detach if pulled too hard, and the cable is made of flame-retardant material.

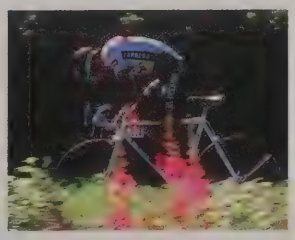
Eurosport pulls English on analogue

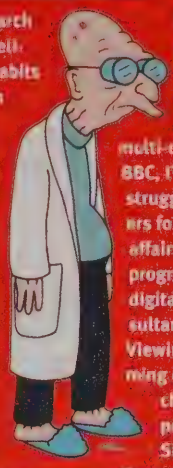
The popular international edition of Eurosport on Astra 1 analogue has moved to German-only broadcasting.



A few thousand British homes and many on the Continent were surprised when the channel stopped broadcasting the English commentary.

They had continued watching the analogue Eurosport feed because it emphasises different sports to British Eurosport – and it's free-to-air. But the German producers had started showing programmes designed specifically for their home market that didn't have English commentary – so they decided to axe the lot.

Ratings round-up



The Broadcasters Audience Research Board (Barb) has always been a reliable yardstick of home viewing habits but its figures could become even more accurate, thanks to a new audience measurement system that makes use of some nifty Big Brother-style gadgetry.

Satellite systems are, of course, common in pubs and clubs, and the new system developed by research company GfK Media records viewer's choices in these areas too. From March 31, 1,200 participants have been wearing a small watch-like device with a microphone that records small one-minute sound clips of what they watch. These are downloaded each week and matched up with samples from programmes being shown at the time. GfK is currently talking to Barb about using some of its data, and it will be interesting to see what effect it will have on ratings for sports programming.

Elsewhere, it appears that once-dependable programming staples are taking a bit of a hammering in this multi-channel digital age. The BBC, ITV, and Channel 4 are all struggling to hold on to viewers for religious, current affairs, arts, and children's programming in homes with digital TV, says research consultancy Human Capital. Viewing of religious programming on the five main channels has fallen by 84 per cent in homes with Sky Digital (not that there's any shortage of alternative religious viewing there). Conversely, digital TV viewers are spending more time watching sport, movies, and soap operas. RIP, public service broadcasting? Well, the licence fee may be a bind to many, but give us a multi-faceted BBC over Dream Team any day.

Audience in millions. Covers March 30-April 27. Source: Barb

As we were still reeling from the awfulness of new Sky channel Friendly TV and the apparent impossibility of finding a music video on The Amp that hasn't already been shown 1,000 times (OK, so we might be exaggerating slightly) came news that Live TV could be making a comeback. The channel that introduced News Bunny, topless darts, and trampolining dwarves to discerning cable-watchers was once the subject of a candid BBC documentary in which ex-controller Janet Street-Porter watched with visible horror as her original creation was transformed from a sort of 24-hour Network 7 to ex-Murdoch man Kelvin MacKenzie's idea of, er, mass appeal TV. With highbrow offerings like Celebrity Shag Match currently making up the bulk of Sky One's innovative scheduling, the channel could well have a fight on its hands.

■ Global satellite positioning has had many applications in the past, from keeping track of wildlife to giving motorists a sense of direction. Now one bright spark ex-TV exec has won government research funding to develop a GPS supermarket trolley (insert your own 'off his trolley' or 'basket case' gag here). The idea is that you type in what you want and then follow the arrows on the screen to the shelf you need. Would have been a great way of cheating at Supermarket Sweep.

■ As Big Brother 4 grinds to a been-there-done-that finish, news reaches Footprint that a teenage version, tentatively titled Teen Big Brother: The Experiment, is in the works at Channel 4. Rather than featuring hours of work-shy twentysomethings sunning themselves and talking rubbish in a fake garden on a studio back-lot, this is apparently going to be an 'educational' programme, looking at how young adults 'collaborate'. Hmmm.

■ Education (of a sort) was also high on the priorities of Germany's Big Brother contestants, whose recent amorous antics – including stripping naked and licking chocolate off each others' chests – were enough to have broadcaster RTL2 take the programme off the air altogether. You're supposed to pay for that sort of thing, you know.

■ Finally, one channel that could certainly do with a bit more light-hearted variation in its programming is Bravo, whose top 10 ratings for one week in April consisted of such cheery offerings as Street Crime UK, World's Most Incredible Medical Videos, and World of Pain. Sounds more like a Marilyn Manson discography than a TV schedule ■

Competitions

The acclaimed sci-fi series Farscape may have been prematurely cancelled, but its fourth and final season was arguably its best. Farscape: The Illustrated Season 4 Companion by Paul Simpson includes a detailed episode guide, behind-the-scenes secrets, and contributions from the cast and crew, including a foreword by Ben Browder (Crichton). The book is now out to buy, priced £10.99, but we have five copies to give away, courtesy of Titan Books. For a chance to win one, just answer the following question. Name the living spaceship which is home to the Farscape gang? Is it a) Soya, b) Toya, or c) Moya? Send entries, marked 'Farscape competition' to the usual address.

Multi-award-winning US crime series Law & Order is currently the longest-running and most popular show on US TV. If you have missed out on showings over here then Law & Order: The First Year should the perfect way to catch up. This six-disc DVD box-set contains all 22 episodes of season one, along with a documentary on its creation, and it is now out to buy at £44.99. We have three box-sets to give away, courtesy of Universal Pictures Video. For a chance of winning, just answer the following question. Name the other long-running New York-set cop series created by Hill Street Blues mastermind Steven Bochco? Is it: a) The Bill, b) NYPD Blue, or c) Boomtown? Send your answer to the usual address marked 'Law & Order' competition.

Closing date for all competitions is July 22 ■

Barry Fox pries into the digital TV industry every month in What Satellite & Digital TV

The BBC's plans to save tens of millions by switching off the encryption of its Sky programmes, shutting down its free viewing card service, and changing satellites from Astra 2A to 2D to try to control foreign reception are rapidly disintegrating into farce.

The BBC has had to postpone the May 30 big switch – probably until July. Let us paint a much clearer picture of what is going on.

The BBC has been paying Sky £7million a year for use of the NDS Videoguard system and prominent listing in Sky's Electronic Programme Guide. But Sky wanted to increase this to £17million a year – which is what ITV is already paying – when the existing BBC contract ran out at the end of May.

The ITC has already rejected a complaint from ITV that this is too high, so the BBC saw no hope of winning with a similar complaint. So encryption would cost the BBC £85million over the next five years.

BBC boss Greg Dyke's plan was to follow the lead from CNN, which broadcasts in the clear and pays Sky £28,000 a year for an EPG listing. Sky is already raising CNN's charge to £70,000 a year and, with this in mind, the BBC offered to pay Sky a total of £1.875million a year; £70,000 a year for each of the network and regional TV services.

Sky responded by threatening to rob the BBC of its prime slots in the EPG: 101 for BBC1 and 102 for BBC2. Sky said that once the BBC stops encrypting, viewers in the Republic of Ireland will be able to receive the British programmes and there will be a clash with Irish broadcaster RTE, which pays Sky for the use of 101 and 102 in Eire.

'SKY PLANS TO RELEGATE THE BBC TO EPG SLOTS 214 AND 215, WHERE FEW PEOPLE WILL FIND THEM'

Sky plans to relegate the BBC to EPG slots 214 and 215, where few people will find them. BBC engineers argue that as long as RTE continues to encrypt, there's no technical reason why the Irish broadcaster should not continue to appear as 101 and 102 on Irish TV sets. Sky's engineers say the BBC's clear signals on 101 and 102 will confuse the Irish EPG.

The BBC said: 'This is a red herring.'

Sky said: 'The BBC misunderstands our technology.'

The BBC has now complained to the Independent Television Commission, and the ITC has asked both parties not to take any hasty action that would upset viewers.

A BBC spokesman says: 'We are happy to co-operate in this matter as the interests of digital viewers are core to our original decision to go in the clear.'

Sky offered to extend the contracts until June 29 to give the ITC time to make a decision. Sky will refund the BBC's extra payments if the ITC then finds in the BBC's favour.

However, the BBC wants the contract rolled over until two weeks after the ITC reaches its decision, or July 14, whichever date is earliest. This would give both Sky and the BBC extra time to plan for whatever decision the ITC reaches. At the time of writing, Sky had not agreed, and the ITC had not ruled.

The law gives public broadcasters like the BBC the right to 'due prominence' on an EPG, and the ITC now has to rule whether a listing at 214 and 215 is prominent enough.

A spokesman for the ITC said: 'We are entertaining the complaint and seeking more information from all parties. When a decision is made we will it on our website.'

Now the chips are down, the BBC is much more open about the way it has been giving licence fee money to Sky. The BBC confirms that until now it has carried the full cost of making and sending out the free-to-view Solus cards. Channel 4 and Five pay only what the BBC describes as 'a modest contribution towards the call centre'. ITV pays nothing.

Over recent months the BBC-funded call centre has been adopting a tougher policy on answering viewers' questions about ITV reception. Basically, it refuses to! But ITV's duty office now tells viewers how to get round the problem: 'It is correct that the helpline would not be able to help with ITV1, but they should be able to help with Five, so if you speak to them again, only mention Five and then they will be more than willing to help. Our signals are received once all others are.'

No one at ITV, Channel 4, nor Five has yet said how they will cope with the card issue after the BBC stops encrypting and funding the operation.

A spokesman for Five says: 'Following the BBC's decision to change its satellite transmission arrangements, the Free To View service – whereby special cards were issued – is no longer available. Five will not be distributing Free To View Cards but you can still find us at the same position on Sky's programme guide. To receive Five in future on DST you will need to subscribe to a Sky package, although we remain a free element in any of Sky's subscription packages.'

So once the BBC ducks out, viewers in areas where Five cannot be picked up from terrestrial transmitters will no longer be able to use satellite unless they pay Sky. If the ITC rules against Sky, and insists that the BBC stays on 101 and 102, the BBC stands to save £75million over the next five years. The commercial broadcasters are then likely to follow the BBC and stop encrypting. This would cost Sky £30million a year in lost revenue. The fight is sure to turn nasty.

And the BBC still has to face the music from copyright owners which have so far struck deals and charged prices for programmes on the assumption that only a few people outside the UK will be able to watch them. Once encryption stops, anyone in Ireland with an ordinary dish, and many people in Europe with larger dishes, will be able to tune in.

Whatever the ITC decides, it is going to have enormous repercussions, and probably legal challenges in the High Court. Its role is not made any easier because the ITC's chief executive, Patricia Hodgson, was John Birt's head of policy at the BBC when the original contracts with Sky were signed five years ago.

Although the ITC hands over responsibility to new regulator Ofcom on December 15, it's unlikely that even the ITC can hang this one out until then ■

Comedy's big studio risk

All that's new in the skies above the US and from the networks on the ground is reported every month by Chris Forrester

NBC has won Thursday evenings, seemingly forever. Go back 50 years and it was Dragnet, and Ironside in the 1960s, then Cosby, LA Law, Cheers and Seinfeld, right up to the present day's Mad About You, ER, and Friends. But this winter's 18 episodes of Friends will be the last, and viewers will no doubt bemoan this as the end of an era, and that they don't write shows like Friends anymore. Viewers had the same grumbles about every one of the previous hits.

In fact, NBC struggled hard with Seinfeld at first, with the Cheers audience needing time to get into Jerry Seinfeld's comedy head, so to speak. Seinfeld had not done well on test screenings, and studio execs agonised over whether to even put the show on air.

But now NBC is searching hard for Friends' replacement. The first problem is that despite Friends' success, NBC hasn't actually 'won' Thursday evenings in terms of overall numbers for the past season or two.

CBS has managed that, thanks to the CSI drama series, plus a little help from the Survivor reality show. Indeed, the competition smells blood, thinking that one final big push may dislodge NBC from its time-honoured position. So NBC is working hard to beef up ER, Will & Grace, and Scrubs to maximise their remaining value, while at the same time looking for replacements for Chandler & Co. This season, NBC has been hard-selling Scrubs as Friends' heir-apparent, airing it on Thursdays at 8.30pm, where it instantly loses an average 30 per cent of the Friends audience.

Scrubs, now well into its second season, theoretically has the bells and whistles of a sitcom that might speak to the same 18-to-49-year-old viewers who also watch Friends (young doctors coming of age at a hospital, and starring a sensitive, cute guy with mussed hair in a show that blends hyper-reality with the requisite amount of pop culture referencing). Time will tell if the network succeeds. But the situation is serious, as Wednesday's big show The West Wing is also in ratings decline, and even ER is beginning to slide.

Thursday is network TV's biggest night of the week. More viewers tune in on Thursday than any other night of the week and it is considered the valuable battle ground that a network needs to win to have any impact on the all-important advertisers for the rest of the week. Thursday is the night when the valuable viewers tune in – the 18-to-49-year-olds. And the advertising value these wealthy viewers represent is huge.

Scrubs – cute enough to be the new Friends?

Take the car manufacturers as an example. Auto-makers and light truck/van-builders spend a staggering $280million across all the networks on Thursday evenings! Hollywood's spend was almost as impressive, spending $216million on Thursday nights to tell viewers what the big films were that weekend. It's big business, and NBC wins the lion's share – thanks to its comedy schedule.

Depending on re-runs of most of the aforementioned comedy shows is Comedy Central, a cable and satellite channel owned until recently 50/50 by Viacom and AOL Time Warner. Time Warner is having big problems and decided to sell its share to Viacom (for $1.2billion). Comedy Central launched in 1990 after Time Warner agreed to merge its Comedy Channel with Viacom's struggling Ha! service. Comedy Central has grown nicely, hence the $1 billion-plus value, and has been the cash behind such ratings winners as South Park.

Comedy Central will now fall firmly under the control of MTV Networks, and the first priority, says MTV Networks' president Tom Freston, is to look at whether a Comedy Central film channel might work. Viacom owns Nickelodeon and has pumped cash into movie spin-offs of Nick's Rugrats, and some sort of crossover that could tap into MTV's fan base as well as Comedy Central's devoted viewers.

But that's not all that's happening at Viacom. Besides MTV and its half-dozen sub-brands (plus VH-1 and its channels), and Nickelodeon, Viacom has expanded. TNN, or The National Network, which Viacom bought back in 2000, has just said it will soon change its identity again into Spike TV. TNN/Spike TV is a top young adult entertainment network and is seen in more than 85million US homes and while it focuses mostly on re-run material, it is where cable viewers get Star Trek: The Next Generation, as well as CSI, Highlander, Miami Vice and Baywatch. Spike TV relaunched in June.

Viacom also now owns CMT: Country Music TV, with its concentration on most things Nashville-based. However, there's a new kid on Viacom's block, the College Television Network (CTN). It's a music network that's fed into eight million college kids, their dorms, bedrooms, and student unions. Although it depends mostly on music videos for its output, it has one big attraction over its music rivals in that it gives considerable airtime to that bizarre period when US college kids are permitted to go wild – 'Spring Break'. Visit www.collegetelevision.com and you'll see what I mean! ■

Fixed for free TV

Free-to-air digital satellite is set for a boost when the BBC drops its encryption in July, but going beyond the Sky Digibox is a mystery to most. The first part of our series explains free-to-air receivers and fixed dishes

Satellite TV has much more to offer than just Sky Digital; there are thousands of free TV channels streaming down from every country in Europe and quite a few from the wider world.

If you're an expatriate, a languages student, or just curious about the rest of the world, it's worth investing in something more flexible than the ubiquitous Sky Digibox and minidish.

From the middle of July there will be a reason – even if you couldn't give a damn about the rest of the world; the BBC's satellite TV channels will no longer be scrambled, so you'll be able to pick them up using any digital satellite receiver and a suitable dish.

Digital TV and radio signals are compressed using the MPEG2 system, and encoded using the DVB-s format, which helps correct of errors introduced during their 70,000km round trip.

Free-to-air channels can be picked up by any digital satellite receiver (even a Sky Digibox). Signals from Sky, its overseas counterparts, adult channels, and other signals not designed for public consumption are scrambled using a variety of encryption systems. These include Videoguard, Viaccess, and Seca Mediaguard, and all require different equipment to watch, which we'll look at in a future article.

The Equipment

The Dish

Focuses the satellite signal, which is little stronger than a 100W bulb – seen from 35,780km away. So it's important that your dish is a smooth reflector and correctly aimed at the satellite you're after.

Most modern dishes are of the offset variety, which don't look directly at the satellite and have some advantages over the prime focus type, and mesh dishes are popular because they look better. In weak signal areas a solid reflector is recommended because it's more efficient.

The LNB

AKA Low Noise Blockdown-converter, it collects the signals and performs several tasks. Modern universal LNBs separate the signal by either horizontal or vertical polarity (older LNBs used to require a separate polariser), which is controlled by a voltage sent from the receiver through the downlink cable. The LNB amplifies the signal and converts it to a lower frequency more suitable for transmission through a cable.

Downlink cable

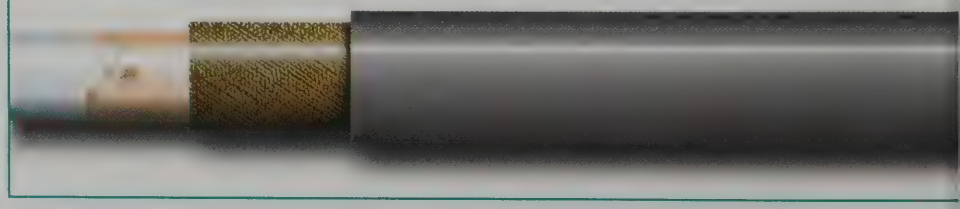
The cable links LNB to the receiver. High-quality double-shielded cable such as CT100 is recommended to reduce interference from other electrical devices nearby. Satellite cables are terminated with F-connectors, which provide a secure, low-interference join.

The receiver

The receiver tunes in to your selected frequency, decodes and uncompresses the digital TV signal. The receiver then converts the digital TV signal into analogue pictures and sound for your TV and home cinema system.

If it is being broadcast, the receiver also extracts the information for an Electronic Programme Guide (or EPG), which tells you what's on now and for up to a week ahead, and for teletext. Some receivers have their own teletext display software, others insert the information into the vertical blanking interval (or VBI) of the PAL television signal, where it can be picked up by your TV.

Some channels also broadcast in several languages and with subtitles, which the



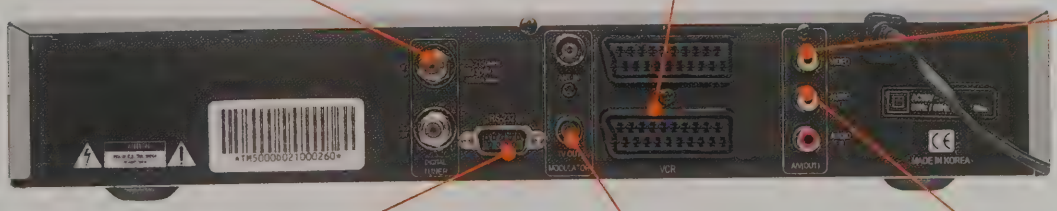
Put your dish together before going up the ladder

BACK TO BACK

LNB input and loopthrough – the LNB cable plugs in here and a second receiver can be connected to the loopthrough by a short cable. It usually has control of the LNB only when the primary receiver is in standby

Scart sockets – the recommended audio-visual connection. Carries stereo audio and composite PAL, RGB or S-video pictures (RGB and S-video are preferred). The VHS Scart is usually a loopthrough connection, so your VCR can connect to the TV through the receiver

Composite video output – a third video output option



(not shown) Digital audio output – either optical or coaxial, provides a high-quality audio output. Can usually pass Dolby Digital surround signals to compatible equipment

Serial port – links to a PC to upgrade the software in your receiver or edit the channel lists more easily

UHF loopthrough – the lowest quality way to watch your satellite TV, but convenient if your TV doesn't have Scarts, composite or S-video inputs

Stereo audio outputs – for connecting your receiver to a home cinema system

SETTING UP

Broadcast TV satellites orbit the Earth some 35,780km up, a distance at which their speed exactly matches the movement of a point on the Equator below. Calculating the angles to find this 'geostationary' position from your own location involves some basic geometry.

Fortunately, there are several free PC programs which will calculate the azimuth (the angle to the satellite from due South) and elevation (the angle from the ground up to the satellite), and even take into account the effect of Earth's wandering magnetic poles on your compass reading.

To install a fixed dish you'll need a compass, a spirit level, a protractor, a drill, a mounting bracket, a sturdy ladder, some cable tacks, waterproof sealant, and self-amalgamating tape.

Use the software to find your satellite and, using the compass, spirit level and protractor, find a spot from where your dish will have a direct line of sight to the satellite. Beware of trees; it is no good setting up a dish in the winter that will be obscured when a tree comes into leaf in the summer.

Fit the bracket to the wall, using a spirit level to ensure the pole is vertical. The dish should have an elevation marking on the rear bracket, which you can preset to save trouble. Then attach the LNB and mount the dish on the bracket, using the compass to point it as accurately as possible.

If possible, set up the receiver for a fixed dish with universal LNB, with a portable TV in a room you can see while at the dish (and, hopefully, even operate with the remote). Otherwise, set up the receiver and get a friend with a loud voice or a walkie talkie/mobile phone to tell you what appears on screen.

Find the receiver's signal strength and quality meter (it's usually in the LNB or antenna setup menu) and, if both register above 50 per cent, try to scan for a channel on your desired satellite. If not, then you'll have to move the dish gently until the meters register.

When you've got the receiver aligned as accurately as possible, you should be able to improve the signal quality a little more by rotating the LNB to find the correct 'skew angle'. It is rare that the horizontal and vertical polarities of a signal are in line with horizontal and vertical at your spot on the planet.

You should have a decent quality signal for the basic satellites we're watching this month ■

'IF POSSIBLE, SET UP THE RECEIVER FOR A FIXED DISH WITH UNIVERSAL LNB, WITH A PORTABLE TV IN A ROOM YOU CAN SEE WHILE AT THE DISH'

Hot spots

Three satellite locations dominate the skies over Europe where TV is concerned: Astra 2A,B,D/Eurobird 1 at 28°E (strictly speaking it's 28.2°E and 28.5°E); Astra 1B-K/2C at 19.2°E; and Eutelsat's five Hot Bird satellites at 13°E. You'll find the channels' frequencies and other tuning details in the Channel Check section from page 158 to page 165.

Astra 2x is the location used by Sky and the BBC. It's also home to about 60 other free-to-air channels – and they're not all QVC rip-offs. From the UK, you'll need a 45cm dish in the South, and a 60cm dish in the North.

Astra 1x is the home of Germany's 30-odd free digital TV channels, plus another 30 French, Spanish, Italian, English, and Polish channels. UK viewers will need a 60cm dish in the South, 80cm in the North.

There are hundreds of free channels on Hot Bird. Italy is prominent, but almost every European nation is represented, even if it's only one channel. A 70cm dish should be sufficient anywhere in the UK.

Aim your dish at any of these locations for an exciting introduction to digital satellite TV. Of course, there are dozens of satellites and a simple system like this can only pick up one. In next month's Back To Basics we'll look at different ways of receiving multiple satellites with both fixed and motorised dishes, plus more advanced fine-tuning techniques.

F-connectors are the standard high-quality for satellite leads

Weather eye

Satellites aren't used for TV and radio only; now Hot Bird is beaming down weather pictures taken by the latest generation of Earth-watching satellites. John Locker shows you how to pick them up

Changes were already on the horizon when, three years ago, What Satellite & Digital TV first looked at receiving L-band weather data from the geostationary Meteosat birds.

Waiting in the wings was MSG 1, Meteosat Second Generation, Flight 1. It would open up a new era of weather monitoring and forecasting, made possible by very high resolution images.

Initially, MSG-1 was scheduled to launch in October 2000, but project delays put things back by nearly two years. Then, on August 28, 2002, an Ariane 5 launcher lifted the spacecraft into orbit to the delight of operator Eumetsat.

Towards the end of last year the data began to stream down from the new platform situated at 11°W, but with the high resolution images came a problem for weather satellite enthusiasts.

Suitable equipment for direct reception of the information would be licensed, and the equipment required would be very expensive.

All good things must come to an end. Or do they?

Just a few weeks ago, Eumetsat announced that re-broadcast weather images would be transmitted via a commercial satellite to include direct to home reception, using the Eutelsat Hot Bird fleet at 13°E.

Information will be collected from the MSG ground station and directed to the Eumetcast uplink site. From there, the data will be fired up to Hot Bird and made available in DVB data format and, best of all, they can be picked up with a digital satellite PC card.

The service is a collaboration between T-Systems, a division of Deutsche Telekom AG, Tellique Kommunikationstechnik GmbH, and Eumetsat.

Eumetsat recommends the Technisat Skystar 2 card, and although other DVB PCI cards may work, only the Skystar has been used in initial tests.

The weather data is cutting-edge stuff, so you'll need at least a 1.5GHz PC (Pentium 4 or faster) to handle the stream, plus oodles of hard drive space – at least 40GB. It is suggested that the compressed files are opened up on a separate PC, although this is not essential.

The Technisat DVB card has been reviewed in What Satellite & Digital TV in the past, and is a plug-and-play device. Existing users are urged to download the latest drivers from the Technisat website. At the dish end a standard 70cm Hot Bird dish is suggested. No problem there, I'm sure!

To handle the data stream, special software has been developed by tq-TELLICAST. It decrypts the key coded material and performs error correction and management of the files.

The software is available from T-Systems, subject to a registration fee, currently estimated at about €55.

Once registration has been completed and the software installed, users will be able to receive a variety of images from visual to infrared at incredibly high resolution and clarity, from full disc views of the Earth to specific areas of Europe.

Although this is ground-breaking stuff, with many aspects still under discussion, there's no doubt that the service is going to prove very popular.

The number of subscribers may have to be limited during the trial stages, so if you are interested, it's best to get your registration in sooner rather than later.

Full support is already available on the Eumetsat website in the form of a technical document. 'Multicast Distribution System, EUMETCast. EUM TD 15', which can be downloaded as a PDF file. It includes a full rundown on how to install both Skystar 2 card and the T-system software. You'll also find transponder details – the service will operate on 11.096GHz/H, SR 27500, FEC 3/4. You may wish to check the signal strength on your PCI card before making a decision to register.

Regular updates on the progress of the project are posted on the Eumetsat website at http://www.eumetsat.de/en/

As we go to press, the trials have started and the first images are being processed by registered users ■

HOW TO REGISTER

Online copies of the registration form can be downloaded from http://www.eumetsat.de/en/dps/helpdesk/registration.html, again a PDF file. Once registered and licensed, a user name and key will be released which will be needed to operate the T-Systems software. For full software purchase details see page 9 of EUM TD 15.

Alternative software, 'MSG Data Manager' has been written by David Taylor. David has an excellent section about MSG on his website: http://www.satsignal.net Weather Satellites, MSG-1 & ATOVS and a page dedicated to his software at: http://www.satsignal.net Satellite Tools, MSG-1 Data Manager, where he explains how to use the programme and gives examples of some of the images downloaded via Hot Bird.

Finally, you might like to pay a visit to the Remote Imaging Group website at http://www.rig.org.uk/, which deals with all aspects of weather data monitoring. The associated internet group 'rig-l' can be found on Yahoo! Groups.

VISIOSAT TRISAT

MARTIN PIPE RECEIVES THREE SATELLITES SIMULTANEOUSLY WITH THE UPDATED BISAT

The problem with motorised dishes is that they're expensive, tricky to install and prone to failure (if they're not serviced every two years or so). Most modern dishes rely on DiSEqC-controlled motors, which move slowly between the desired satellites because they're powered by the receiver.

Despite all this, the prospect of tuning into other satellites is a tempting one. In the UK the two 'birds' of greatest interest (other than Sky's Astra 2 group at 28.2°E, of course) are Astra 1x (19.2°E) and the Hot Birds at 13°E.

Various manufacturers have made bolt-on feed brackets that allow a single conventional dish to 'see' two different satellites. Such widgets were designed for use with the 60cm or 80cm dishes that formed part of a Sky analogue installation. They wouldn't work with the 45cm minidishes that started appearing on walls with the coming of Sky Digital. These smaller dishes provide insufficient gain for usable results with Astra 1x or Hot Bird.

French company Visiosat recognises that many would like reliable reception of two or more satellites without the hassle and expense of motorisation. Hence the Bisat dish, distributed in the UK by SCC. The Bisat looks different to the average dish. This is because its 75cm glass fibre reflector has been designed to receive two satellites simultaneously – in this case, Hot Bird and Astra 1x (or any other two satellites spaced by 6°). As with the dual-bracket arrangement of yesteryear, there are two LNBs are mounted on the feedarm – one for each satellite. Visiosat says the performance is equivalent to two separate dishes. But what about 28.2°E? It may be of secondary interest to the French, but it's very important over here.

Visiosat has produced a bracket that accommodates a third LNB, dedicated for reception of Astra 2x., so the Bisat is converted into a Trisat! Signals from this third satellite won't be as strong as the others; after all, the Bisat was only designed to receive two satellites spaced by 6°. But the dish size, coupled with Astra 2x's UK footprint, means that reception should be OK.

In a typical setup based on the 'Trisat', the 28.2°E feed would be wired to a Digibox for the reception of your Sky package. The two other feeds, meanwhile, would go to a dedicated free-to-air digital receiver for Astra 1x and Hot Bird reception.

+ WORKS WELL. FAR EASIER TO INSTALL THAN OTHER MULTI-SATELLITE DISHES

– SOME WEATHERPROOFING AND POTENTIAL CORROSION ISSUES

The Bisat is easy to install, even with the optional bracket and third LNB. Alignment is far easier than it used to be for the dual LNB brackets of old. You set up the Bisat as you would a conventional (az/el) offset dish, for best results from Astra 1x (which is received by the middle LNB). Then it's just a case of tweaking the LNB for maximum signal – a slot in the bracket allows it to be raised or lowered slightly, before being secured by tightening up a screw.

Rotating the LNB will also make a difference (known as skew, this will differ slightly for each of the three satellites). The two latter procedures are then repeated for the two other LNBs – up/down adjustments are again provided in both cases. We recommend use of a digital meter for making these adjustments (eg, the Lacuna Sat Meter 2). Failing that, your digital receiver (switched to whichever of its setup menus gives you signal strength and quality readings) and a portable TV could be taken out to the dish instead.

Out of the box, the Bisat was set up within half an hour. It performs very well – certainly with Astra 1x and Hot Bird – using the 0.7dB Sharp LNBs that accompanied the review dish. All of the usual European channels could be received without interruption, even in heavy rain. But what about 28.2°E? The signal strength wasn't particularly high, yet our pictures remained during a heavy rainstorm, which is more than could be said for another Digibox fed from a standard minidish. Even so, we would recommend using an lower-noise LNB, such as the Invacom LNBs SCC distributes.

Build quality is good, but there are reservations. For a start, the threads of the upper two dish-securing screws are exposed to the elements (this is intentional, for easy 'slot 'n' screw' installation). They could corrode fast, so apply grease to all screw threads. Note that the nut and bolt that clamp the LNB assembly to the (extruded) feedarm are exposed too. Wrap this part of the boom with self-amalgamating tape (which you'll also need to protect the LNB connectors from the weather). However, the Bisat is worth a look if you want simultaneous reception of the UK's three key satellites. Performance is excellent; the switch between satellites is faster than any motorised dish and – LNB faults notwithstanding – it won't go wrong! ■

ID DIGITAL CI-20E & F-20E

IDENTITY IS EVERYTHING. IS ID DIGITAL A NEW BRAND OF DIGITAL SATELLITE RECEIVER, OR A HUMAX WITH A SHINY NEW EXTERIOR? ALEX LANE INVESTIGATES

New models of receiver don't always land in the What Satellite & Digital TV test room as soon as they're on the market, but it is always worth the wait. In some cases, they're not so much a new receiver as a cunningly repackaged model that we've already seen, especially where the software is concerned.

ID Digital's receivers fall firmly into this category; they're an upgraded and streamlined version of the popular Humax range of receivers. The upgrades consist of a new, even more compact exterior, new internal chipsets, and more memory for storing channels, and the streamlining comprises a limited but entirely functional range of connections.

The F-20E is a free-to-air receiver, the CI-20E has a single common interface slot hidden behind the lower part of the fascia. Both receivers share the same exterior in other details, a simple silver case just 50mm high, 260mm across and 180mm deep. The fascia has just four control buttons: channel up/down, TV or radio select, and standby. As with the equally compact Humax F1-Fox, there's no numeric display – just three LEDs to indicate standby, power on, and error warning.

The remote control has a host of special function buttons that make the receiver easier to use and it's responsive and comfortable to hold.

The most obvious absence from the back panel is a modulated UHF output. Removing this enables the manufacturer to save the money which has (we hope) been spent on higher quality video and audio processing chips than you'd find in other comparably priced receivers.

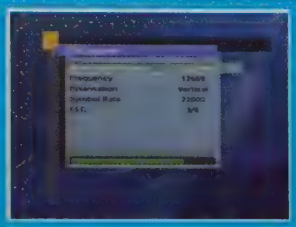
Powering up the CI-20E displays menus that look instantly like those of a Humax receiver such as the F1-Fox. This is a mixed blessing, because regular readers of What Satellite & Digital TV will know that we've always liked Humax's receivers for their range of functions and performance, but it is always evident that in some places the software has been tested only by the same engineers who designed it – not the end user who lacks detailed technical knowledge. Particular bugbears include the use of the term 'service' instead of 'channel' and the DiSEqC 1.2 motor control menus.

The lack of user testing is unfortunately most obvious when you turn the receiver on. It helpfully prompts you to set up your LNB for the first satellite, but pressing 'OK' jumps to the Manual Search menu, not the Automatic Search of a full satellite which most users will be looking for. In fact, the only way to get on to an automatic search or access any other menus is to start a manual search, then interrupt it. Also useful at this stage – but absent here – is a signal strength and quality meter, although you do get these on the motor control and manual search menus.

Setting up a fixed dish system isn't any more difficult than this – you can have up to 32 antennas, selected with with DiSEqC and tone burst switching, although its unlikely anyone will have that many fixed LNBs. The ID Digitals can cope with any kind of Ku-band or C-band LNB, and there's a handy preset for universal LNBs.

A motorised system is more complex to set up, and you won't even find the motor control menus without referring to the manual. You have

BACK TO BACK



Update software by satellite

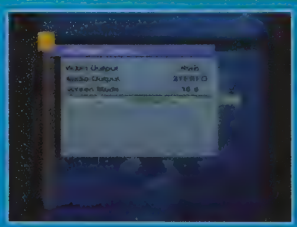
Motor control menus are a little complex and hard to find



Full display control options

to switch on motor mode, which is sensible, then go to the Manual Search menu, which isn't, and there are no onscreen prompts indicating what to do. What's more, ID Digital has kept the pointless User/Installer modes, which means you have to switch from user to installer when you want to access certain motor commands.

It's a shame, because these receivers can handle up to 32 satellites and have a full range of DiSEqC 1.2 commands – step and continuous movement, motor reset, and movement limits – but it feels like the functions were added to software for a fixed dish receiver, not designed-in from the beginning.

+ GOOD PERFORMANCE, PLENTY OF FEATURES

– MOTOR MENUS ARE CONFUSING

There are two modes of automatic channel search, a quick scan or a detailed scan. Quick scan searches a preset list of frequencies and symbol rates, and is very quick indeed, taking only four or five minutes to search even the thousands of channels on Hot Bird. Detailed search is exactly the opposite, a thorough scan through the entire Ku-band (or C-band on the respective satellites), using symbol rates set by the user. It's very slow, however, and the user can only input symbol rates between 16000 and 30000, so you won't find the most interesting SCPC transponders with symbol rates in the low thousands.

That shouldn't bother most users of the F-20E and CI-20E, who are likely to be after the major free-to-air channels rather than obscure feeds.

These receivers do make it easy to navigate through the thousands of channels available. Channels can be listed alphabetically, by satellite, and sorted into five favourites list or 16 genre lists such as Movie, News, Show, Sports, Children's, Music, Art, Education, Leisure, Shopping, and Adult.

In addition, you can delete, rename, and generally move around any channel or satellite. The one thing you can't edit is the master list of transponders used by a quick scan; any new transponders (such as analogue Astra channels used for digital) will have to be manually scanned or wait for a software update.

The channels themselves look very good. Crisp, clear pictures with rich colours look especially impressive in either RGB or S-video. Even some of the cheap, low bit-rate Italian shopping channels on Hot Bird look almost acceptable, although less can be said for the audio on these channels, which is produced on irredeemably cheap equipment. The audio on most channels is good, with low noise levels.

The F-20E and CI-20E both support standard DVB programme guide information, and can display up to a week's information for those channels which show it (mostly the German channels on Astra 1x). You can reserve up to 20 programmes from the EPG to a timer, with daily and weekly repeat options, although there's no manual timer for the many channels which don't provide EPG data beyond now-and-next. There's also a useful four-channel now-and-next EPG which can be overlaid on the live picture.

Teletext is re-inserted into the VBI, and channels can be locked with a PIN number, with locks by default on all the installation and channel organisation menus.

The ID Digital receivers can boast a high level of functionality and good audio-visual performance at a competitive price.

Most people will find little fault with them in everyday use and, with a little more user-friendliness, they could be very good all-round receivers ■

DAEWOO DS608P

A SET-TOP BOX FOR WATCHING FREEVIEW CHANNELS? THAT'LL BE THE DAEWOO. BUT IS IT REALLY GOOD VALUE FOR MONEY? GRANT RENNELL GOES BARGAIN-HUNTING

DETAILS

Model: Daewoo DS608P
Price: £100
Features:
UHF loopthrough: Easy
AV outputs: 1 Scart
Interactive software: MHEG-5
EPG: MHEG-5
Supplier: Daewoo

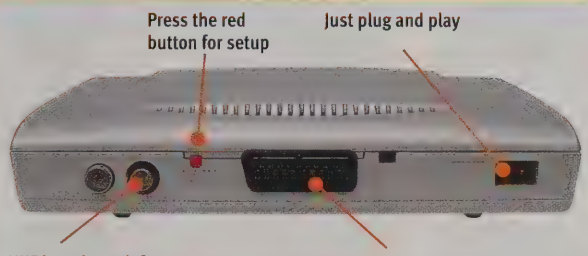
Channels aside, if anything is to get those millions of people who have yet to convert to digital TV to part with their cash it's to make the transition as easy as possible. So the need is to make the hardware that's required to watch it so 'plug-and-play' that even your gran could use it.

Like the Labgear DTT100 (tested in June's issue), the DS608P is a digital terrestrial receiver that sports a SetPal tuner designed for this purpose. While (SetPal claims) being more sensitive and less prone to interference than some other tuners, the SetPal technology also makes setting up the receiver a very simple process indeed.

You just plug in your aerial, power it up, and hold down the red button on the rear of the DS608P for about five seconds to start the tuning process. Those with non Scart-equipped TVs using UHF connections have the option of selecting which UHF channel you want to use to watch DTT on your TV. The box then tunes in all available channels (taking less than two minutes) and displays a list of those found. You then have the option to discard any channels you don't want to keep.

Connectivity on the DS608P is the same as the Labgear. There's just a single RGB Scart on the rear and a UHF loopthrough for taping analogue while watching digital channels (or vice versa) but, sadly, there are no audio outputs.

BACK TO BACK



The remote is chunky and dark grey, with clearly-labelled buttons for pretty much every feature available.

Where the DS608P does differ considerably from the Labgear is in looks. It has its own curvy, lightweight, silver casing with a large window at the front displaying green and red LEDs indicating power on/off. It's not the most compact or best-looking DTT receiver we've come across, but it is a tidy enough design, nonetheless.

The navy blue menu system is very intuitive to navigate. Pressing the Guide button gives you a full-page EPG showing a list of all available channels each with now-and-next programme info and with the option to jump straight to them. Pressing the Info button while watching a channel brings up a half-screen page displaying now-and-next programme summaries. At the time of writing, there's no way of creating favourites lists beyond retuning and using the option to discard channels altogether, although this should have been rectified with an over-the-air software update by the time you read this.

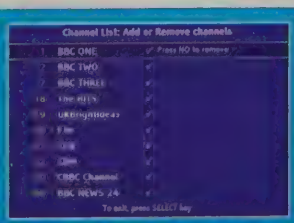
Other notable features are MHEG-5 support for digital teletext and interactive services, a choice of three aspect ratios, 4:3, 16:9, or 4:3 cutout, and a subtitles option.

Pictures are rich and colourful on the DS608P. Even with a relatively weak signal we got a crisp and detailed representation of daytime BBC channels with little artefacting in evidence. Sound is also very acceptable.

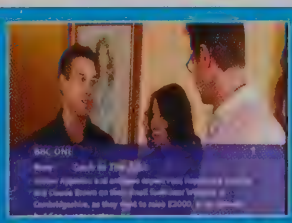
Like the Labgear and the Pace DTVA before it, the DS608P is a fine way to get Freeview for technophobes and a useful addition to any spare television.

However, its lack of connectivity (just the one Scart and no audio outputs) may alienate those who want a wider variety of audio visual options from their DTT adapter ■

There's a UHF modulator for non-Scart users



You don't have to keep all the channels you find



Now-and-next programme info is attractively displayed

AVERTV DVB-T

THE DESKTOP TV EXPLOSION CONTINUES APACE WITH THE LATEST DIGITAL TERRESTRIAL PC CARD FROM AVERMEDIA. GRANT RENNELL GETS BUSY WITH HIS SCREWDRIVER

Those grumbling at the price of the £349 price tag of the excellent Pace Twin Digital TV recorder would be wise to look to PC TV cards for a cheaper way of digitally recording Freeview channels. After all, what's a 20GB hard disc compared with the 80GB plus capacity of your average PC these days? Not to mention the fact that you can also transfer recordings to CD or DVD afterwards.

The DVB-T from Taiwanese company AVerMedia is a small PC TV card with a DTT tuner that will slot neatly into a spare PCI slot on your motherboard. It comes with the obligatory aerial input, plus composite video and (best of all) an S-video input. The benefit of the latter two is that it means you can plug your remaining AV equipment into the card and then record it onto your hard drive along with DTT programming. There's also an input for the supplied remote sensor that sits on your desktop relaying commands from the DVB-T's smart black remote control.

Installation is straightforward. The DVB-T comes with drivers supporting the most recent versions of Windows (98SE onwards) and once you've installed the applications that come with it, you're prompted to perform a hardware test. The software then scans for all available DTT channels before taking you to the main interface.

Selecting the Control Panel reveals the full attractive-looking display that's not dissimilar to a software DVD player. This makes use of easy-to-fathom icons, with most major functions only a single click (or remote press) away.

The fact that there's no EPG and no digital text/MHEG-5 software is initially disappointing, although the presence of buttons for these features both onscreen and on the remote suggests they will eventually be added by a later software update.

A side menu allows you to skip directly to channels and there's a split-screen preview option giving you a 16-screen snapshot gallery of what's on most other channels. Calling up the Setup screen gives you a wide range of tweakable settings. You can choose from a range of skins for your player, set limits for the screen capture option, and manually scan for channels. It's also possible to create favourite lists, lock out certain channels, and set a limit on how much hard disc space can be used by recordings.

The DVB-T offers numerous options for managing your viewing. As is now de rigueur for digital TV recording devices, PVR functionality is very much to the fore. Selecting pause begins the time-shifted paused recording process with how long you can pause for being entirely dependent on how much hard disc space you either have or are prepared to use.

Recorded footage is saved to your hard drive then overwritten the next time you to decide to time-shift.

Timed recording is possible using the scheduler which allows you to set up recordings of both TV and radio programmes for up for to a month in advance. You can also use this to schedule 'preview' (ie, switch to) other channels – useful if you're waiting for a programme to start on the other side. Recordings are saved in MPEG-2 to your hard disc (C:\ is the default) and equate to roughly 1.8GB of space an hour. There are no quality settings, however.

The minimum specification for the DVB-T is an 800MHz Pentium III PC with 128MB, and anyone who has bought a PC in the past three years should have no problems running it. We tested the card using an Athlon XP 2100 system with 512MB RAM and managed to use the internet, listen to music, and word process – all with the DVB-T running happily in the background.

Indeed, picture and sound quality are just as good, with few noticeable incidents of artefacting. The only problems we did encounter were with channels suffering intermittent break-up which could be put down to poor signal quality rather than any fault of the card.

Just like Freeview adapters, DTT PC cards are becoming ever more commonplace. Although the DTT tuner and PVR functions are excellent, it's the ability to also record from external sources that really sets the DVB-T apart from many of its peers – plug in an S-video-equipped satellite receiver (ie, a Grundig Digibox), say, and you're away. The only real disadvantage here (aside from the occasionally poorly translated manuals) is the current lack of an EPG and digital teletext, which may ultimately disappoint those looking for a 'proper' alternative to a DTT adapter or, indeed, the Pace Twin ■

TV/DVD COMBIS

DVD IS THE MUST-HAVE AUDIO-VISUAL SUCCESS STORY OF THE NOUGHTIES. GRANT RENNELL LINES UP FOUR 'VERSATILE' TELEVISIONS THAT COME WITH DVD PLAYERS ON BOARD

Why buy?

It's perhaps true to say that no living room seems complete these days without a DVD player, as ever-soaring hardware sales attest. Those shiny little discs with their huge capacity for delivering great pictures and sound and copious 'added-value' bonus features have put the plain old videotape well and truly in the shade.

A downside to this great leap in digital technology is that, like the VCR before it, it requires another box in your front room to add to your AV box mountain.

Manufacturers are constantly making DVD players smaller, slimmer or – increasingly – vertical-standing for this very reason. But another box is still just that – another box. What's more, you still need enough connections on your TV to plug the thing in without have to swap leads all the time.

Some manufacturers have awakened to this by offering TVs that come with a built-in DVD player. Not only do these save on space, connections and, in some cases, money, but they are also, of course, an easy upgrade for anyone looking to buy a new (perhaps second) TV and DVD player at the same time.

What features should I be looking for?

Excluding the Panasonic LCD TV reviewed here, it is rare for TV/DVD combis to have 5.1 surround sound capabilities out of the box. Often you can expect to find either an optical or coaxial digital output on the rear instead, which will enable you to connect the TV to a Dolby 5.1/DTS-equipped speaker system to get surround sound. Seeing that cinematic surround sound is one the best features of DVD, there's no reason not to invest in the latter – which can now be picked up relatively cheaply. If circumstances are against your having a speaker system (perhaps for reasons of space) you can always fall back on the ubiquitous inclusion of a Virtual Dolby setting. This creates a more dynamic, room-filling sound using a TV's left and right speakers. However, onboard speakers are rarely beefy enough to make this a substitute for the real thing.

> 'WIDESCREEN SETS ARE WITHOUT DOUBT THE BEST WAY TO VIEW DVDs'

On a similar note, although 21in 4:3 sets are cheap and ideal for smaller bedrooms, widescreen sets are without doubt the best way to view DVDs (or, indeed, many digital TV programmes) as they were meant to be enjoyed. After all, you don't see 4:3 screens at the cinema do you?

Any drawbacks?

Most TV/DVD combis tend to have a relatively basic feature set so DVD connoisseurs looking for other features such Region 1 playback, compatibility with the myriad recordable DVD formats available or component video outputs may perhaps be better served by splashing out on a separate player (something around the £150 mark should suffice).

Many people may regard the repair factor as the biggest problem with TV/DVD combis. Much like combination VCR/DVD players, if either is broken you have the inconvenience of sending the whole thing off to be repaired (assuming that it can be) and being deprived of your TV viewing (and no Wotsat reader wants that!). In truth, TV/DVD combis aren't really more likely to become faulty than are 'separates'. If this still concerns you, well, as a wise man once said: 'Patience is a virtue' ■

KEY FEATURES:

PANASONIC TX-15LV1

Panasonic's LCD TVs may lurk on the more expensive side of the market, but the exemplary 22in LT22 proved that the extra outlay can sometimes be worth it.

At first glance, the TX-15LV1 would appear to be a movie fan's desktop dream, with its 16:9 widescreen panel (rare for an LCD TV), onboard DVD player and surround sound compatibility. Let's take a closer look.

Build

Happily, the TX-15LV1 continues the elegant design precedent set by the LT22. Indeed, considering how much is onboard, this is a surprisingly thin TV, and the whole thing rests on a sturdy pivoting stand with an oval-shaped base.

A thin strip of grille mesh along the bottom of the fascia conceals the speakers, while a light blue raised semi-circle to the right of the screen draws your attention to the side-mounted slot loading DVD player.

The remote control, meanwhile, is a variation on the now-standard Panasonic design with separate direction pads for the DVD and TV portions. Although it is initially confusing, such is the price you pay for having a 'hybrid' TV that's designed to be a jack of all trades.

BACK TO BASICS

Standard remote design

The slot-loading DVD portion is on the right side

Features

The rear panel is fairly bristling with connections. There are S-video inputs and outputs, an RGB Scart, composite and stereo phono inputs, and a UHF input. Also included is an optical digital audio output for connecting to an amp system to get 5.1 surround sound (a Dolby Digital 5.1 decoder is included).

The DVD player plays Region 2 DVD-video, CD and video CD discs only (not CD-Rs).

Pictures

Images from our Sky Digibox are good, if not stunning, using the Scart connection. As with many LCD panels, the picture can appear a little 'fizzy' close up and is best enjoyed from a few feet away. It's also, perhaps, overly bright – and no amount of fiddling with the brightness and backlight settings could totally satisfy us on that score.

Nonetheless, the viewing distance is satisfactory, colours are well contained, and black levels are good and deep for an LCD panel. This carries over into the DVD performance, which is detailed and more natural-looking than TV sources, and allowed us to fully appreciate the pockmarks on Matt Damon's face in The Bourne Identity. This pleasingly solid performance carried over into our viewing of The Lord Of The Rings: Fellowship Of The Ring Special Edition, whose digitised vistas appeared so sharp they attained an almost 3D-like quality in places.

Sound

Speakers on the TX-15LV1 aren't the most high-powered we've come across, with just 2W left and rights and a 2.5W subwoofer onboard. Nonetheless, stereo sound reproduction is crisp and bassy enough for any modest desktop set-up, whether it's films or TV you're watching, and neighbour-baiting surround-hounds are more than catered for by the option to connect the TX-15LV1 to their amplifier, should they so wish.

Conclusion

Although we have slight reservations about the TV picture, the TX-15LV1 is bit of a show-off, all round. This is especially true when it comes to the desktop DVD-watching, with its excellent picture and copious sound configuration options. Yes, there are cheaper non-DVD-equipped LCDs on the market but few hold a candle to the TX-15LV1 for overall value ■

MODEL: Philips 21PT6807
PRICE: £399
TEL: 0208 665 6350
WEBSITE: www.philips.co.uk
KEY FEATURES
- 21in 4:3 screen
- 1 Scart (RGB)
- Virtual Dolby

PHILIPS 21PT6807

The other 21in TV/DVD in our test is about to be replaced by a new model – the 6818 – which adds an extra Scart socket for the same price. We've been very impressed by Philip's budget widescreen sets in the past. Is this TV/DVD mini-monster made of the same stuff?

Build

Twenty-one inch 4:3 TVs always tend to look a bit odd because of their dimensions. Despite the unavoidable blockiness this engenders, the 21PT6807 has a much smarter, less cluttered-looking fascia than the Thomson set also reviewed here.

The screen is surrounded by an attractive grilled frame entirely concealing the stereo speakers. The DVD tray is tucked beneath the screen to the left of the set and – in keeping with the minimalist theme – there are just two operating buttons in evidence on the fascia, one for power, the other for operating the DVD tray; the rest are on top of the set. The remote is the de rigueur design for Philips TVs; curvy, compact and with the ability to also control a Philips VCR.

Features

Side AV comprises stereo phonos, a headphone input, and composite video input, and on the rear you'll find a single RGB Scart, aerial input and a digital coaxial output for connection to a Dolby-equipped speaker system. The Region 2 DVD player is capable of playing DVD, VCD, CD and CD-R/RW discs (including MP3 files) and trick-play features include freeze-frame and slow motion/fast-forward. There's also an FM radio tuner, plus teletext and parental and disc lock options.

Pictures

DTT pictures on the 21PT6807 are above average for a budget set. Colours are well-contained and detail levels are equally good.

Switching to DVD, the picture is also impressive, if not quite the equal of the Thomson set. The set's Contrast Plus processing technology generates rich, colourful images, delivering a fine reproduction of the late Conrad Hall's superb Oscar-winning cinematography in the Road To Perdition.

Sound

As with the Thomson, it's Nicam and Virtual Dolby only for those without Dolby-equipped surround systems, and the 10W speakers manage to deliver a solid enough rendition of both.

During the hotel room shoot-out in the Road To Perdition, the sound of gunfire is given sufficient zing using the Virtual Dolby setting, even if it is no match for connecting the co-ax output to a proper 5.1 system.

BACK TO BASICS

Palm-friendly remote

A digital co-ax output gives surround sound compatibility

Conclusion

It may not be widescreen but the 21PT6807 is a smart-looking, high-performing source of DVD entertainment for the space-conscious. It may not be as cheap as the Thomson model, but its overall sound and picture performance puts it just ahead of its rival. Those looking for a really good deal should probably wait for the 6818, whose extra Scart will come in handy for your satellite receiver/set-top box ■

SAMSUNG DW28G6VD

A 28in widescreen TV with a built-in DVD player should be enough to satisfy most people's desires to turn their living room into a mini popcorn palace, and Samsung has always been a dependable mid-price manufacturer. Let's see if the digital dream conforms to reality.

Build

The DW28G6VD has a bright silver casing clipped at both ends where the speaker grilles are located. A thin blue strip beneath the screen is where you'll find the loading tray for the DVD player. It's not the most striking of designs, though, and is rather plastic-looking.

The grey remote control, on the other hand, makes a good job of making it easy to navigate its many buttons with the most important in easy reach of the responsive central thumbpad.

Features

At first glance, the DW28G6VD has pretty standard connections for a widescreen TV. On the right-hand side are two stereo phono inputs, a composite video input, and a headphone input while on the rear are two Scarts (one RGB) and a UHF input. Underneath these, however, you'll find the useful inclusion of both digital optical and digital coaxial outputs for surround speaker systems, although there's no onboard decoding.

The Region 2 DVD player, meanwhile, supports DVD, CD and VCD playback.

Pictures

DTT pictures from our Thomson TDT100 are actually some of the best in this test. Images are very sharp and natural-looking and contrast levels are also very good; deep reds were in evidence on BBC News 24.

The DVD picture is a bit soft and consequently lacking in detail comparison to the other entrants in this group test, but no more than you'd expect from a mid-range DVD player.

Sound

Virtual Dolby only it may be, but it does add a noticeably dynamic feel to proceedings, whether it's the clashing of swords during the opening battle in The Lord Of The Rings or bird song during a lull in The Bourne Identity. Plain old stereo is also very clear-sounding when watching using the Thomson box.

Conclusion

It may not be the most sparkling-looking 28in set we've come across, but the DW28G6VD still acquits itself well as a mid-range buy. It has enough decent features to make it the ideal centrepiece of a modest home cinema setup. If you're building up the latter, this may suffice ■

MODEL: Thomson 21CT181S

KEY FEATURES
- 21in 4:3 screen
- 1 Scart (RGB)
- Virtual Dolby

THOMSON 21CT181S

A 21in 4:3 TV with an integrated DVD player does seem a strange beast when you consider that most DVDs are tailored to viewing on a widescreen TV.

The £299 price on the 21CT18S is certainly not to be sniffed at though, so let's get down to business.

Build

All told, the 21CT181S has a rather untidy appearance. The silver-grey casing has a rather plain fascia with numerous buttons and unconcealed connections dotted underneath the screen around the DVD tray. Either side of these are speaker grilles covering the the left and right speakers. In contrast, the remote control is the distinctive, elegant curvy Thomson design with added buttons for controlling the DVD portion.

Features

Front AV comprises two stereo phonos and a composite video input. Also present is a headphone output and even a microphone input included for singing along with karaoke DVDs. The rear has a single RGB-capable Scart, stereo phono outputs and an aerial input.

The DVD player is Region 2 and supports DVD, VCD and CD and CD-R (with MP3) playback including both PAL and NTSC discs. It is also particularly fast-loading compared with the others in this test.

Pictures

Although the externals don't inspire too much confidence, pictures on the 21CT181S are actually very impressive for a budget-priced set. DTT pictures from our Thomson TDT1000 were very well represented, with bright colours and crisp edges and plenty of detail.

Thomson has a reputation for making good DVD players, so it's pleasing to report that the DVD picture is equally good, giving strong contrast and plenty of detail. The mountain ascent during a blizzard in The Lord Of The Rings: Fellowship Of The Ring is always a good test of a DVD player's capabilities and the 21CT18S gives a good account of itself on this score, managing to keep everything solid and sharp.

Sound

The combined output of 12W isn't exactly a floor-shaking proposition, but Nicam stereo from the left and right speakers is adequate, if slightly muffled sounding.

The Virtual Dolby setting is better, however, and allows you to better appreciate the effect of revving engine effects during the car chase sequence in The Bourne Identity.

Conclusion

The similar spec puts the 21CT181S up against the Philips in this test – the most obvious difference being the lack of an FM radio (no great loss, especially if you already have Sky, perhaps). Although the DVD player is excellent, the clunky design and average sound do let the side down a bit. Still, as it is the cheaper of the two, budget buyers may be prepared to forgive the 21CT181S for these shortcomings and welcome it into their bedroom, regardless

Greece is just starting out in interactive

Euro-active

Britain leads the world in interactive TV, but now the rest of Europe is starting to get in on the act. Sean Hargrave looks at the red button habits of our nearest neighbours

It is no secret that the UK leads the world in interactive digital television, so it will come as no surprise that if you take a look around Europe the main developments to watch have traditionally been happening close to home.

This is starting to change as interactive services start to gain momentum, but if one wants to know what is at the forefront of interactive television, the best place to start is still the UK.

Recent research by Accenture into what Britons are doing when they press the 'Red' button on their remote shows that, perhaps unsurprisingly, sports tops the list. Having a bet with Sky's very own Surrey Sports and switching camera angles is the nation's favourite interactive genre, research reveals – hotly followed by tele-voting and playing games.

Indeed, around Europe, sport is also most definitely in the vanguard of interactive services.

British viewers have long been spoilt with multiple feeds on a single channel, allowing digital viewers tuned to pick which game they watch at Wimbledon, to switch between events at the Summer and Winter Olympics, and to follow individual players in a football match.

In fact, it was through Formula 1 that German digital viewers were offered Europe's first multi-camera racing action some nine years ago, although the demise of F1 Interactive is symptomatic of the problems affecting interactive TV around Europe.

The sports message definitely seems to be spreading to the rest of Europe. In France, Canal Satellite and Canal Plus are offering extra information about teams in their rugby and football coverage, albeit without the option of changing angles. The same goes for Champions League football in Spain, supplied by Via Digital.

The Turks also got their first taste of extra sporting information owing to a 2002 World Cup service from DigiTurk, although that has yet to be repeated for domestic games.

This ability to get extra information on screen at the touch of a button is proving very popular across Europe with weather forecasts. Although the UK is, again, leading with its BBC News 24 and Sky News Active multi-screen services, the rest of the Continent is at least now allowing viewers more choice.

In use they are fairly similar, offering viewers the choice of the day and region for which they wish to see a forecast, as well as additional information such as pollen indices and snow conditions for skiers.

Broadcasters to watch out for here are Stream TV and Telepiu in Italy (soon to become Sky Italia), TPS in France, Via Digital in Spain, Digiturk in Turkey, and Viasat in Scandinavia. In fact, interactive weather is so popular it also gives Poles a rare opportunity to interact with their sets, thanks to the weather service on Cyfra Plus.

'THE SUCCESSES OF I'M A CELEBRITY, GET ME OUT OF HERE AND BIG BROTHER HAVE PUT TELE-VOTING ON THE MAP'

Where the UK leads – once again – is taking this interactivity a stage further by allowing viewers to vote on shows to change their outcome, or simply to play along.

The massive successes of I'm A Celebrity Get Me Out of Here and Big Brother have put tele-voting on the map – albeit a map that does not extend beyond the UK.

The nearest that continental Europeans come to interacting with shows is each country's inevitable version of Big Brother – be it The Loft in France, or The Wall in Greece.

The latter is a good example. The Greek broadcaster Nova offers users the chance to select extra information about the contestants and the rules of the game, although there is not the multi-camera option provided in the UK.

If all this sounds very UK-centric, it is for the very good reason that if you are talking about interactive in Europe, Britain is far and away at the forefront because when Sky Digital rolled out it insisted that subscribers connect their set-top boxes to a telephone line.

This has been backed up by a massive education programme and constant appearance of the red interactive button on screens to make sure most of the 40 per cent of UK households that have interactive TV are au fait with the system.

This could not be further away from the experience in continental Europe. For example, in France, fewer than half of those people who have interactive television know anything about it and only 4 per cent of adults ever do anything interactive with their TV set.

Justin Hewelt, founder of BroadbandBananas, says one of the main reasons for this lack of awareness of interactive television around Europe is that there's no equivalent of a magic red button.

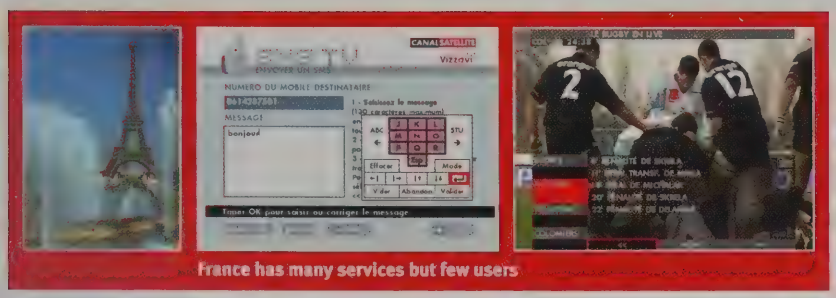
'Unlike in Britain, there isn't a single button that accesses interactive services,' he explains.

'There hasn't been the co-operation between set-top makers and platform developers to mean that pressing 'Red' will take you to interactive services. So it's not being promoted heavily, because if they tell you to press a button and on some boxes you're not taken to a voting screen, or whatever, the broadcaster gets inundated with calls.

'When you consider it costs around $10 to take every call – that's to have the staff, seat, and equipment waiting – you can see that it's not worth the hassle of promoting interactive services as much as in the UK.'

The problem of knowing about interactive services is one thing – actually having them is another issue altogether.

Ten years ago, while the UK was effectively in the dark ages with just four terrestrial channels, Central Europe and the Benelux countries were enjoying widespread cable. Not only did this give them cheap local phone calls, it also meant



France has many services but few users

Extra features have proved popular in Spain

Italy's interactive TV is likely to improve when Sky Italia launches

Britain is the interactive capital

Germans don't get many TV extras

Poland's ITV is limited to western and some towns that anyone in or neighbouring the German-speaking countries had a wide choice of channels at very low cost.

Anyone looking for a reason why Kirch Media proved to be Germany biggest-ever corporate failure need look no further than the simple fact that – in a region of Europe where there are so many free and cheap channels – paying subscriptions for premium digital content and interactive services seemed, and still seems, a pointless expense.

It is a huge issue for any broadcaster which wishes to upgrade Central Europe and Benelux to digital interactive services. It was then, perhaps, ironic that Germany was chosen to be the springboard of MHP, the technology that was billed as doing for television what the Java programming language did for the internet.

The cross-platform software has been devised to allow a broadcaster to roll out entertainment across many networks on satellite, cable or terrestrial – an issue that is currently holding back shows from migrating across Europe.

So far, the main activity in Germany has been TV channel NDR's launch party for the 2002 Eurovision Song Contest, where guests – and not the general public – could vote for their favourite song.

While industry insiders point to Finland and the rest of Scandinavia as an alternative launch-pad for MHP, it has to be conceded that only 5,000 MHP set-top boxes have been bought in Finland and so if one were looking for the long-promised MHP revolution, it certainly would seem to be a way off yet.

'The obvious trouble has been the people that would benefit are not the people that need to pay for it. That would come down to the platform owners and the companies making the set-top boxes.

'There's always been some friction there, with them wondering why they should pay to upgrade their systems and equipment for somebody else's benefit,' says Gartner analyst Davnet Cassidy.

Another problem is that MHP is very demanding and requires faster set-top boxes with more memory – all of which costs more at a time when broadcasters are trying to cut the cost of winning new subscribers.

WORD SEARCH

A show that has caught television executives' eyes is on a little-known Catalan channel, TV de Catalonia, which has championed a format many expect to sweep Europe.

In a show translated literally as 'I Have No Word' viewers watch a brief clip for clues to a mystery word. If they think they know it, they use their mobile to text the answer to a premium rate service to stand a chance of winning €300. The daily show, which only lasts a minute or two, is already getting 7,000 texts a day and makes €40,000 a month profit. Not bad, considering that it is a regional programme in a country that has little interactivity.

'It shows what you can do with texting,' says Cassidy.

'I truly believe that where there is little interactivity provided by the set-top box – or where people simply don't know about it – programme-makers will turn to text messages because while not everyone can interact with their TV, everyone can send a text. It also means a programme maker gets a bigger slice of profits because they're not relying on the network's interactive service to generate votes.

'That's a reason why it's also being used in the UK to sidestep voting via the remote control. The Dating Channel in the UK is a really interesting one to watch. They've got people queuing up to pay 50p to send in texts. It's also the main reason why Sky has just launched its three new music channels. With so much voting, chat and requesting going on through SMS, it's the big market all programme-makers are now moving into,' he adds ■

THE GEEKS SHALL INHERIT

Humans and robots are old hat. The BBC's latest virtual reality project brings computer-generated warriors into a live TV arena – and you could be in the driving seat

Fantastic combat games have always been a staple of British TV entertainment, from the spandex-clad warriors of Gladiators to the metallic combatants of Robot Wars. Later this year a new breed of gladiator will make their way on to our TV screens, fighters constructed of computer code and clad in pixels – the warriors of Fightbox.

Combining the ever-popular beat 'em-up video game genre with a series of knockout live tournaments on BBC Three, Fightbox is the latest experiment from the boffins at BBC1 who've been breaking ground in interactive TV since its early days.

The contest began in May on home computers around the UK. Players can download the Fightkit from the Fightbox website, then design their own virtual warriors from a huge range of body parts, then decorate and colour them to their own tastes.

Each body part alters the warrior's strength, dexterity, speed and stamina, with limited amounts of special weapons and armour available. Textures and decorative features like badges and logos can even be edited and imported to make truly unique warriors.

Every player can have up to three warriors, and put them through their paces in a series of training arenas to hone their fighting skills, dexterity and wits. The scores can be uploaded to the Fightbox leaderboard and players can continue playing at training levels which get harder with each attempt. Success wins points, which can be spent on your three warriors to improve their abilities.

The warriors with the best scores will go through to the televised rounds running in mid-July. Fightbox expects to take around 45 warriors through to the heats – but a few interesting warriors who miss the grade might go through, and anyone foolish enough to give their warrior an offensive name or decoration won't be allowed to compete.

It's on TV that the battle gets hot and the technology hotter. Using new virtual studio technology, the Arena will be brought in front of a live studio audience as players control their warriors from the sidelines. Warriors will slug it out against each other and the Fightbox Sentients – house champions designed to sort out the strong and skilled from the merely lucky.

The heats and eliminator games won't just be about brute force – games will test agility, dexterity, and the players' wits as much as strength and stamina.

The Eliminator stages will be shown daily on BBC Three in September (repeated on BBC2), and the ultimate winner will become the first Fightbox Champion. This brings the ultimate prize – to become a Sentient and take on the best newcomers in next year's Fightbox tournament ■

The Fightbox Fightkit is available for download from www.fightbox.co.uk now, but entries close June 27. The finals will be shown on BBC Three in September

Demand your say

As the ITC is about to hand over to new TV watchdog Ofcom, TV erotica fans must make their representations for deregulation. As Dave Taylor says, it's now or never

'What I don't like is gratuitous sex and violence. I think it is bad and lazy TV and I don't know why we have to see it.'

You may think I am quoting the late Mary Whitehouse, but you'd be wrong. It was Jonathan Edwards, the world-class triple jumper, who was recently appointed to the TV censor that will soon take over from the Independent Television Commission.

Ofcom, the new TV regulator, is set to be ready towards the end of the year. It recently announced the composition of its 'Contents Board' which will have a big say in deciding what we will be able to see on TV and, in particular, on British satellite sex channels.

The Contents Board has been set up with representation for nations and regions as required by the Communications Act. The 11 part-time members have an age range of 36-63, and various religious beliefs, including Christian, Jewish, Quaker, Sikh, and non-believers. Five of the 11 part-time members live a long way from London, two of them in rural areas. It was felt important to get UK-wide thinking rather than London metropolitan thinking. Six of the members are women, five are men.

> 'IT WAS FELT IMPORTANT TO GET UK-WIDE THINKING RATHER THAN LONDON METROPOLITAN THINKING'

Rosemary Kelly represents Northern Ireland. She is deputy chairman of the Ulster Orchestra, president of Help The Aged, and a founder member of the Board of the Irish Film & Television Academy.

The member for Wales is Sue Balsom, who recently hosted taste and decency focus groups for the Broadcasting Council. Matthew MacIver is the Gaelic-speaking member for Scotland, who was until recently a head-master.

Edwards represents England, and his interests are sport and Christianity. However, from his opening remarks about his new job, it doesn't sound like he has representation in mind; sounds more like imposition.

I wonder if anyone has been appointed to speak for the viewers. Who will speak for those that like soaps, reality TV, and Hollywood films? And, of course, who will represent those of us who want to see explicit sex on satellite?

All is not necessarily bleak, though, the Communications Act is broadly deregulatory. It seems to prefer the idea of self-regulation. Ofcom sounds keen on public consultation and will be researching public views on general principles during the summer. A colleague of mine, Paul Tavener [see June Letters] is organising a campaign targeted at allowing hardcore entertainment on subscription TV.

He says: 'If there was ever going to be a time to change the rules then this is it... If Ofcom see there is no support for change, they may simply assume that the status quo is acceptable and opt to carry on with the existing arrangements. This is where you could make a big difference. All that is needed is for a few people to write to Ofcom this summer in support of a change.'

'If you have any interest in freeing British subscription TV from censorship, e-mail me at censorfreetv@hotmail.com, and I will send you details about the arguments, counter-arguments and background information to help you produce a targeted letter. I will let you know when Ofcom formally announce their public consultation.'

In fact, an assurance has already been solicited from Dominic Morris, a director of Ofcom: 'The Content Board intends to consult both genuinely and widely to secure input from all ages, communities and ranges of view on Ofcom's broadcasting standards codes, the public's evolving expectations of public service broadcasting and broadcast news, etc.

'These will address both one-off topics and sustain established surveys which measure how public attitudes to broadcast content change over time, so that content regulation can evolve in step with public expectations.'

If you would like to keep up with developments at Ofcom, I have set up an OfWatch page at www.melonfarmers.co.uk. There seems to be a general expectant buzz in the air that I may soon be able to review British Satellite X channels. Let's make it so ■

In the mood

The Adult Channel is hotter than July so relax and be transported into the eye of the camera as more of your favourite babes put on a show. Virtual Sex series 3 (far right) is the epitome of fantasy each Sunday 11pm.

Knock One-Off Night is a showcase of never-been-seen-before shows (main pic). They haven't been made into series yet, but tell the channel which ones you like, and it might be persuaded to do one (July 26, 10pm).

First Timers' Night line-up is full of newcomers who can't wait to get it off for the cameras (July 5 from 11pm).

It's Valencia Diaz Night on July 12 from 11pm. She's one of the channel's presenters but she's showing far more here than her TV hosting skills.

Do you like your sex dirty? Then Extreme Filth Night is the night for you (see left, July 19, 10pm).

Meet the UK Student House – The New Class. These 'young ones' are prepared to go all the way to pay their way through college (Tuesdays at 11pm).

On Playboy TV, Page 3 babe Nicola Ulian is Babe of the Month. See her on July 6.

In Totally Busted, Jackass star Steve O and a host of porn babes embark on missions to set up unsuspecting participants in sexy situations. See the fun throughout July.

Reality show Double Entry gets to the final stages as the teams get their porn films ready for premiere (Double Entry Weekend, July 25-27).

Let us entertain you

Summer's here, and there is a wealth of free-to-air channels ready to entertain you, come rain or shine, says Eutelsat

If the weather doesn't live up to your expectations, you can be sure that there is something on satellite TV for your viewing pleasure.

The car is the star on Motors TV, which is dedicated to bringing you information about everything on wheels. It will bring you the best motorsport coverage throughout the summer, alongside new car reviews and features. You will find the channel on both Eurobird 1 and Astra 1H.

If gaming is your thing, look no farther than Game Network UK (Eurobird 1) or GoPlay TV (Astra 2) this summer. These channels are dedicated to bringing you all the news and reviews about the latest gaming. However, if you are mobile-mad, why not switch on TX1, a channel dedicated to mobile games. Alternatively, you could share your text message with viewers live on air at Txt me TV, an interactive channel specialising in messaging (Eurobird 1).

Fly-on-the-wall documentaries continue to be popular and if you want more than terrestrial TV can offer watch Reality TV (Astra 2). This channel brings a large slice of reality into your own home and features real-life documentaries of the police, firefighters, emergency room medics, and rescue teams. This is combined with programmes about unusual people, strange places and unsolved mysteries.

If you want to chill out, Performance TV will help soothe and stimulate you with a unique mix of arts, film, jazz, opera and dance coverage; it is available on Eurobird 1. For the latest summer sounds tune into one of the number of pop music channels available. Channel U and Chart Show TV (Eurobird 1) both put you in the driving seat and allow you to select which latest videos are played.

Movie buffs can watch the films that made cinema great at TCM. It showcases films dating from 1920s right up to the 1990s and you can tune into this channel via Astra 2A.

Finally, if you decide to get away from it all by jetting off to an exotic holiday destination – check out the last minute holiday deals available free.

You can view travel guides, news and booking information at Going Places TV (Astra 2D), Thomas Cook TV (Eurobird 1), The Travel Channel (Astra 1G) and Travel Deals Direct (Astra 2A) ■

Radio listeners tune in 'n' turn on

Digital satellite has rejuvenated radio, bringing its greatest revolution since the 1960s pirates ruled the airwaves. Astra tunes in to the grooviest channels

In the UK radio listening is going through a renaissance; audiences are growing across every sector from local public radio to the national networks. A contributing factor is satellite, an alternative to the humble analogue radio tuner – over 6.7million homes receive digital satellite so people have access to over 60 radio channels. The diversity of channels makes it easier for the listener to find something to suits their tastes and this means they listen more.

The Digibox delivers digital quality, interference-free radio straight into your TV. With the addition of a phono connection to your hi-fi you can get great digital radio pumping through your stereo – no need to invest in a DAB tuner.

The BBC has its national and regional radio stations as well as its digital-only services such as BBC 6 music or 1Xtra.

All the commercial channels are listed – talkSport, Classic FM and Virgin Radio. Regional favourites like Capital, Classic Gold, and XFM are available too on digital satellite. Then there are channels exclusively available on digital satellite such as Planet Rock, The Mix, and Core, often satisfying specific musical tastes.

And because satellite offers a nationwide digital service, no matter where you live you'll be able to hear them all. It means that Scots living outside Scotland can hear news from BBC Radio Scotland wherever they want, and people in remote corners of Cornwall can listen to XFM. All over the country people can enjoy the music and chat from some of London's top stations, such as Heart FM. You can transform your radio choice – in most areas you have up to 15 FM stations available, on digital satellite there are about 60.

Radio via digital satellite is free as long as you have a valid TV licence (with a couple of notable exceptions – talkSport and Music Choice are part of the Sky Subscription packages). Music Choice gives Sky subscriber 10 stations free, and for a £5 subscription fee you can have all 44 channels. Here are some of the latest radio services to launch on digital satellite.

■ 6 Music is for people who are passionate about pop and rock. Here you will find a rich mix of contemporary and classic artists ranging from The Clash through to Sly & The Family Stone, via Beck, Bjork, and Public Enemy. The network also champions emerging music talent like The Strokes, Turin Brakes, Elbow and many others. The outstanding line-up of presenters includes musicians, journalists, comedians, and broadcast legends – all united by authority, attitude, and a passion for credible timeless music – including Phill Jupitus, Liz Kershaw, Andrew Collins, Tom Robinson, and Gideon Coe.

■ Relax With A Book is where your favourite writers talking about themselves and their work. Each day it will be bringing a new bestselling, first-time, or established author to you, discussing with David Freeman the inspirations behind their books. Each interview will be available for a day and then available on demand from the archive.

■ Lyric FM aims to fulfil the huge gap that exists in Irish broadcasting. People often want a change from the diet of talk and pop radio available to them and Lyric sates that hunger with a range of music that is diverse, stimulating and enjoyable. Lyric will appeal not only to the classical music aficionado but also to the classical music novice and to lovers of opera, jazz, stage and screen, traditional and world music. Lyric also has its own team of news journalists.

TechnomateTM-5000D

It's always nice to see a new brand of receiver hit the satellite shops, and we've been keen to get our hands on a sample of the Technomate range since we first heard of it in the autumn. The Technomate TM-5000D is the first of several tests we hope to bring from the range.

It's a standard free-to-air receiver, the basic model of a range which includes receivers with Common Interface, positioner, and even an analogue receiver. What's different about Technomate is that the supplier, Myers UK, claims to have been very closely involved with the design of the receivers and software to make sure they don't have the same shortcomings the company has noticed in other equipment it sells.

The price of the TM-5000D is also something different; it's just £99 and, as you'll discover in future issues, the whole range is pretty inexpensive. You'd suspect that this means Technomate has cut corners, but that doesn't seem to be the case; you've got memory for 5,000 channels, a database of 130 satellites – many of them pre-tuned – and DiSEqC 1.2 motor control with USALS auto-location.

Nor does it look cheap. It's a fairly plain silver case, but by no means ugly, with a single discreet roundel of channel-change and standby power controls on the left-hand side of a gently bevelled fascia, a four-digit green LED display, and a drop-down flap on the right (although in this case it's sealed shut as there are no CI slots on the model).

The back panel sockets, as described opposite, is pretty basic, but nothing's missing. All we could ask is that the whole package should be smaller as it's only a free-to-air receiver, but that's not much of a criticism.

The remote control is usually an accessory on which budget manufacturers choose to cut corners. But in this case you get a comfortable, lightweight controller. It's well-labelled and has several useful extra function buttons.

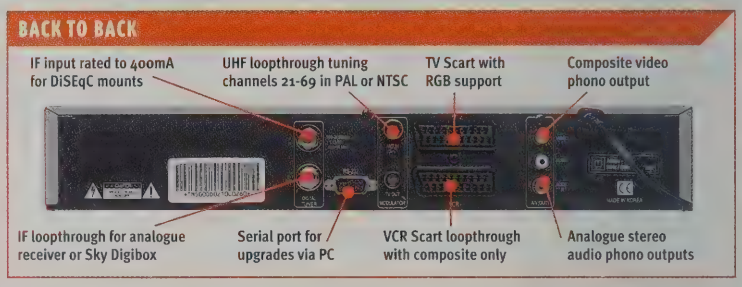
Myers reputedly delayed the receiver by several weeks because it wasn't happy with the control menus, and that attention to detail has certainly paid off. They're very clear and wherever possible there's a one-sixth thumbnail view of the current channel, so you don't miss the show when you go to change some small detail. There's a variety of colour schemes, and you can even set the menus to cycle through different colours, which is a bit hard on the eyes but looks fabulous.

The TM-5000D comes set up for use with a universal LNB and DiSEqC 1.2 motor on a variety of popular satellites, so you don't even have to tune it in (although you will have to set up your motor). You can also select single, wideband, or user-defined local oscillator frequencies, or DiSEqC switches for fixed dish users.

The DiSEqC movement modes also reveal attention to detail. You can move the dish in coarse or fine mode, and adjust the size of fine motion. There's a very sensitive onscreen signal strength and quality meter, and it's very easy to switch transponders to make sure you've got the right satellite. There are movement limits, and in basic DiSEqC 1.2 the recalculate option is available to calculate positions once you've found a couple of reference satellites. In USALS mode it's even easier, and just one position is required, plus your latitude and longitude. You can adjust the dish alignment at any time using the POS button but, sadly, it only offers coarse movement, so you'll probably make matters worse.

Several search modes are available: free-to-air, scrambled or all channels, and single transponder searching. There's a network option for using the NIT to add extra transponders, and you can set the receiver to search several satellites consecutively. The search itself is very efficient and quick, searching huge locations like Astra 1 and Hot Bird in minutes.

There's also an advance search option, through which you can add new transponders, or add single channels using PIDs, which can be entered in decimal or hexadecimal form. Up to a dozen new satellites can also be added, which should be enough to keep any British enthusiast safe for 10 years, especially with a symbol rate range of 2000-45000 available.



IF SOMETHING'S CHEAP AND CHEERFUL IT OFTEN MEANS THAT CORNERS HAVE BEEN CUT, BUT ALL THE TECHNOMATE TM-5000D'S IMPORTANT LITTLE PLACES SEEM TO BE PRESENT AND CORRECT, SAYS ALEX LANE, AS HE GIVES THE NEWCOMER THE ONCE-OVER

'THE TM-5000D OFFERS THE BEST VALUE FOR MONEY WE'VE SEEN FOR YEARS'

LOW-PRICE, LOTS OF FEATURES, EASY TO USE

LIMITED EVENT TIMER

Fortunately, the 5,000-channel capacity is well-organised. Channels are automatically listed by satellite, and you can sort them into free and scrambled, or alphabetically (everything or individual letters). There are eight themed favourites lists, which can have channels from any satellite, and the thumbnail view means you can easily look at what's on a channel. It's also easy to edit the lists, moving, deleting, and renaming channels, and you can put a PIN-lock on any channel as well.

When it comes down to actually watching the channels you'll be pleased, but not overwhelmed. The Scart picture is noticeably improved in RGB mode over composite PAL, and you can further tweak it with the very unusual Colour Control menu. This allows adjustment of brightness, contrast, and saturation, with preset levels for movie, news and sports. Movie level is a little soft, but news and sport are sharp, enhancing the overall picture.

The sound is clear, with very low noise levels and a broad range, even if it is only analogue (but you wouldn't expect digital sound for £99!).

There's a full EPG, with a choice of multi-channel, all-day or programme detail views, plus the usual now-and-next onscreen banner. Teletext fans can choose between a built-in viewer and using their TV with the VBI-reinserted signal. There's a sleep timer and single event on-off timer, and a pause screen option which can zoom in to enhance detail.

There's always a chance of disappointment when you've waited a long time to see something, but there's nothing disappointing about the TM-5000D, which we can honestly say offers the best value for money we've seen in a receiver for years ■

Dirty rotten scoundrels

The Crime Business on Bravo examines some of today's biggest crimes and scams. Elise Harris talked to the biographer of one conman to get the lowdown on the low-lives

PT Barnum is quoted as saying 'there's one born every minute.' He was obviously right on the mark.

Robert Kyriakides is the biographer and solicitor for Syd Gottfried, a conman whose exploits would be legendary if he wasn't so good at covering his tracks.

Syd started his career as a petty South London criminal, stealing from supermarkets and selling cold tea, pretending it was whiskey. After a while he decided there was more money to be made by expanding his criminal horizons.

As he got older he had a scam marking cards and even managed to pull one over on some international diamond dealers. He became ever more creative with his deceptions.

Robert says: 'He made huge amounts of money, spent it very, very rapidly, and had lots of tragedy in his life.

'He's a highly intelligent person; he's someone who can out-think most people and what people have said when they have read the book – and what you might find when you watch the film – is that no one can spot where the con is coming from until the end.'

The Bravo Crime Business programme features one particular con that involved a toilet-cleaning machine to which Syd had bought the rights.

'He managed to get it on to Tomorrow's World, which was quite an achievement. They demonstrated it and it did work. What they didn't show is it actually broke many of the toilets and left people with busted drains – but that didn't matter to Syd, because he'd got the money, he'd sold the machine and gone on to the next scam,' says Robert.

There's no doubt that if Syd had used his talents lawfully he would have gone far.

'He's the sort of person who, if you put him in charge of running a large business would make a huge success of it.

'He goes out amorally, quite coolly, quite deliberately to find a way to take their money off them, preferably in a way where they can't complain, or won't want to complain about it. And that's his security; that means that he's unlikely to be caught.'

> 'HE MADE HUGE AMOUNTS OF MONEY, SPENT IT VERY, VERY RAPIDLY, AND HAD LOTS OF TRAGEDY IN HIS LIFE'

Generally, he's conned other villains, but he's also conned members of the public.

'It was alleged by the Daily Mirror that he was behind a holiday scam in which he promised people a two-week holiday in Spain for £33, all in. Some of them went on holiday, but most of them were asked to pay another £2,500 to fly.

'Syd tends to think if you fall for a con, it's because you had a little larceny in your heart.

'He's not at all sympathetic to his victims, but still a lot more sympathetic than your average burglar, I would have thought,' says Robert.

'I think the key to it is it preys on human weakness, so the master conman will seek to identify the weakness in his victim and then conceive of a plan that plays on that weakness. That weakness is usually greed.'

Robert thinks the Crime Business shows that crooks live strange and sometimes unenviable lives.

'All these characters live parallel lives, almost in a parallel universe. They do things we do – they brush their teeth, they buy food and they go to a restaurant to have a meal, but there are things we do that they can't possibly do. Some of them can't even go abroad because they have no passport. They usually don't have life insurance or mortgages because it's so outside what is possible for them to do.'

Syd and his wife

Robert says there is a lesson to be learned from Syd and people like him; if something looks like an excellent deal or promises the impossible, be very wary ■

The Crime Business, presented by Goldie, is on Bravo from July 7 at 10pm
The Master Con Man by Robert Kyriakides is available to buy at £12.99

It's a wonderful life

UK Horizons is dedicating a day of programmes to Sir David Attenborough. Elise Harris dons her safari jacket and looks at some of the highlights

There are few people as popular and charismatic as David Attenborough. Ever since he joined the BBC in 1952, he has entertained viewers with coverage of the natural world, carving a niche for himself.

These days natural history television is almost synonymous with David Attenborough. In the 1970s the crown may have been Johnny Morris's – with his chirpy voiceovers and animal impressions – but David Attenborough has prevailed; he is the reigning king and the voice of nature.

Now UK Horizons is paying tribute to the man who has taught viewers so much about the world around them.

The seminal Life On Earth isn't being shown, and there are no prehistoric beasts or dinosaurs – what you get is pure Attenborough, his whispery tones and authoritative air are what matters.

'NOW UK HORIZONS IS PAYING TRIBUTE TO THE MAN WHO HAS TAUGHT VIEWERS SO MUCH ABOUT THE WORLD AROUND THEM'

David was the controller of BBC2 in the 1960s, and it wasn't until much later that he used his personal interest in nature programmes to become the icon we all know and love. Since Life On Earth in 1979, a BBC natural history programme without some sort of David Attenborough involvement would be almost unthinkable.

He is the brother of another British institution – actor-director Lord Richard Attenborough – although the two have never worked together. It is tempting to imagine a collaboration – maybe Dickie could give a guided tour of Jurassic Park while David crouches in the bushes, giving a running commentary on the raptor that's about to eat his brother.

In hushed tones, naturally ■

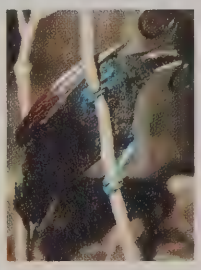
THE BLUE PLANET
The episode of the show Coasts tells you all you're ever likely to want to know about the world's ocean-sides. Many animals who live near coast do not hang around for too long – it's a very dangerous place to be and there are some strange visitors: killer whales beach themselves at high speed, walruses appear to blush, and turtles suddenly crowd on to a beach in their thousands, ready to lay their eggs and scoot.

LIFE IN THE FREEZER
Six back-to-back episodes from the series which celebrates the glory of Antarctica.
A treat for lovers of penguins – but not so much for polar bear fanciers (they live a little too far away.) It's easy to be fooled into thinking that the inhospitable terrain of the icy continent is devoid of life – but the land is teeming with resilient creatures.

LIFE ON AIR
Michael Palin talks to Sir David about his half-century in broadcasting. It's a light-hearted look back over an extraordinary career, with highlights and anecdotes from over 250 TV programmes and appearances.

ATTENBOROUGH IN PARADISE

Attenborough fulfils a lifelong ambition to make a film about the rich variety of elusive and beautiful birds of paradise. There's colourful and stunning footage of some of the world's most beautiful creatures.



THE MAKING OF THE BLUE PLANET

The episode where the underwater camera discovers a mysterious underground black pool is surely one of the most fascinating pieces of nature television ever.

This takes a look behind the scenes of The Blue Planet, with a fascinating look at the techniques used to film the depths of the oceans, where no person has ever gone and can never go. Sir David narrates and presents, and viewers get to hear from the men and women who made The Blue Planet possible.

LIFE OF MAMMALS

A personal journey into the lives of the most successful animals on the planet – the mammals. Mammals are the most complex and diverse group of animals ever to live on Earth. This is the story of 4,000 species which have outlived the dinosaurs and conquered the farthest corners of the planet. How did mammals manage to make it this far, and how come they are so diverse? Rats, dolphins, humans, duck-billed platypuses and giraffes would seem to have little in common, but they all evolved from a few hardy creatures millions of years ago.

Go West

The new season of classy political drama The West Wing starts on E4 this July. Elise Harris assesses the fourth – and perhaps final – term

There are some big changes ahead in this season's The West Wing; anyone who has been watching so far will have to prepare themselves for major upheaval.

The series still stars the distinguished Martin Sheen as President Josiah Bartlet, but Rob Lowe has a reduced role as his character, Sam Seaborn, concentrates on his own political career.

This season Lily Tomlin joins the cast as the efficient and tough Deborah Fiderer, and there are guest slots from Matthew Modine and Taye Diggs. John Goodman also makes a significant appearance.Towards the end of this season Ainsley Hayes (Emily Proctor) is set to be replaced by Friends star Matthew Perry.

Creator Aaron Sorkin recently left, but was onboard for the whole of season four and director Tommy Schlamme also leaves at the end of the season.

The future of The West Wing seems uncertain – how will the show carry on without his influence? And what would happen if Martin Sheen left?

There are rumours that the fifth season will feature a Republican president; presumably this will mean a complete change of cast, something that has never really happened before. It seems unlikely the show would continue to be successful in such circumstances, although with the present US political climate it may find itself a different, more right-wing audience. And if the president is a Republican, but the other characters remain, that could provide some interesting dramatic conflict. Arguably, The West Wing's strength is its supporting cast – CJ, Josh, Toby and Leo may be last men (and woman) standing fairly soon. It is to hoped that they will keep the series from falling apart if they return for a fifth season.

As it is, the show provides a literate and witty look at the inner workings of American government. Stylistically, it seems closer to the sophisticated political dramas of the 1970s (particularly the powerful landmark TV miniseries Washington Behind Close Doors) than to most US drama series – it doesn't assume its audience is made up of idiots, consequently, the viewers rise up to meet it.

There are several other US series that can claim the same level of intelligence – The Sopranos, Six Feet Under, and Oz when it tries hard – but they are all HBO cable programmes, and their audience is limited.

The West Wing airs on a major TV network in the US – NBC. The network is also responsible for Law And Order and its multitude of spin-offs, and there are signs that the same spin-off treatment is happening with The West Wing already. A new show, Mister Sterling, has been created by The West Wing producer Lawrence O'Donnell Jr, and Rob Lowe's new project, law drama The Lyon's Den, was allegedly pitched as 'Sam Seaborn joins the firm'.

As terrorist activity is a major topic in the US at the moment, inevitably the subject will come up on The West Wing. It means that the usual crises – debate about affordable public transport, POTUS having a bicycle accident – are put on hold. The new series looks like it may be the most exciting so far ■

'AS TERRORIST ACTIVITY IS A MAJOR TOPIC IN THE US AT THE MOMENT, INEVITABLY THE SUBJECT WILL COME UP ON THE WEST WING'

The West Wing starts on E4 in July

Ordinary Doe

Amnesiac drama John Doe comes to Sci-Fi this month. Elise Harris tries to remember what happens

If you woke up naked on an island off the coast of Seattle, with no knowledge of how you got there, you would probably be a bit freaked out. Did you have a little too much to drink? Did your friends think it would be a good prank on your stag night?

The pilot episode of John Doe doesn't really address these concerns. Our hero finds himself in just this situation and, despite not remembering a thing about himself, he carries on with his life.

Ten minutes in, he's independently wealthy; a few minutes later he's working as a pianist in a slightly sleazy bar. By the end of the episode he's helping the police solve unusual and strange crimes while desperately trying to find clues to his own identity.

The show stars Dominic Purcell as the man with no past. It's is a bit like The X-Files crossed with Jonathan Creek. There are also many nods to Sherlock Holmes.

There are various clues to John's identity scattered throughout the series.

John is colour-blind – but can see important clues in colour. A picture of a missing girl, a purple getaway car, a woman's turquoise scarf. The reason for his colour-blindness is unclear; he sees in only black-and-white, or shades of grey. Maybe he's a robot. Or a cat. Occasionally, somebody seems to recognise him (like the woman in the turquoise scarf who seems to think his name is 'Tommy').

He has an inexhaustible knowledge of facts and figures and can use them to do almost anything. In the first episode he uses his knowledge to fly a helicopter, drive a car, and amass a fortune. He's an idiot-savant without the idiocy. The helicopter scene is reminiscent of the bit in The Matrix where Carrie-Anne Moss gets a pilot program uploaded into her brain. There is no evidence John is trapped in the Matrix, but it's a possibility.

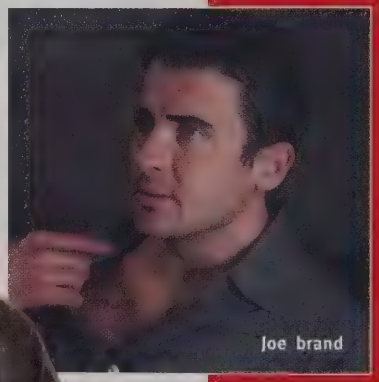
He also has a strange symbol on his shoulder – it looks vaguely like an astrological symbol, but it could just be something he got on a drunken night out. Maybe just before his best man dumped him on the beach.

A mysterious group of people seems to be taking an interest in John – and they are going out of their way to stop him discovering his identity.

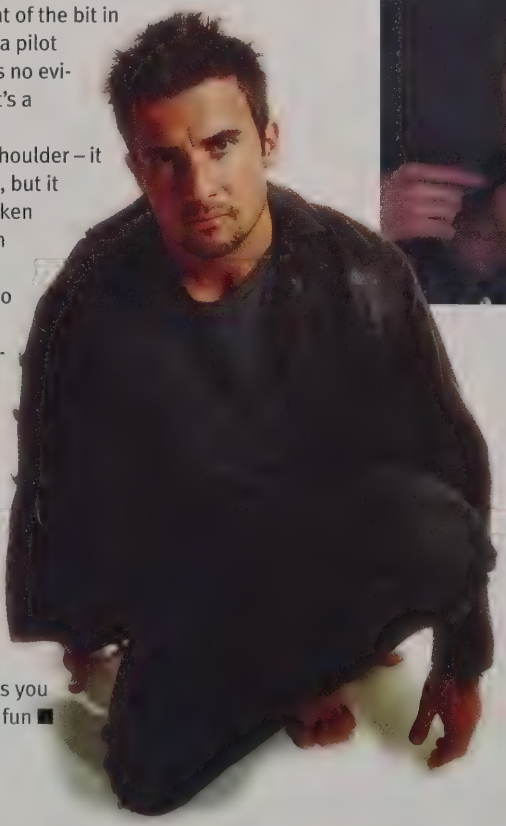
It's all very intriguing, but you can't help thinking there's slightly too much going on. If John was just an amnesiac who helped solve crimes, that would suffice. But he helps solve spooky crimes, and there are suggestions he may be an alien or a science experiment. There's a danger you may suffer from information overload.

As long as you enjoy the ride and don't think too much about the mechanics you should enjoy John Doe – it's good cheesy fun ■

Friends and colleagues don't really know Joe



Joe brand



'HE HAS AN INEXHAUSTIBLE KNOWLEDGE OF FACTS AND FIGURES AND CAN USE THEM TO DO ALMOST ANYTHING'

John Doe is on Sci-Fi from July

Compendium of useless (or useful) facts

John Doe knows everything he shouldn't and nothing he should. He also acknowledges that nothing he knows really means anything.
So it would be safe to assume that he knows all these things

■ The adult human body has 206 bones – infants have 350 (the bones fuse as you grow)

■ Colour blindness – the inability to distinguish between certain colours. It is rare for an individual to see in nothing but monochrome in the way John Doe does. Red/green colour blindness (Deuteranope) is the most common. Another less usual for form of red/green colour deficit is called Protanope. Tritanope is a blue/yellow deficit, which is also very rare. Colour-blindness affects around 7 per cent of men and only about 0.04 per cent of women. Most animals can only see in shades of grey

■ The wingspan of a wandering albatross can be anything up to 3.6m.

■ Amnesia – there are several forms of amnesia. John Doe suffers from retrograde amnesia, which mean he has no idea what happened before he woke up, naked and branded, on an island off the coast of Seattle. He has no long-term memory of his identity. Korsakoff syndrome, usually caused by chronic alcoholism, is another possibility.
Other forms of amnesia include Anterograde, the inability to remember anything after the trauma/incident that caused the amnesia (the sort of amnesia seen in Memento, starring Guy Pearce), emotional or hysterical amnesia – caused by psychological trauma and usually temporary, post-hypnotic amnesia – sustained from a hypnotic state, and Lacunar amnesia – where the affected person cannot remember a specific event, and transient global amnesia – which can occur sporadically and is usually seen in elderly people

■ Many US-set series are actually filmed in Vancouver. Especially those set in Seattle

■ Our hero takes the name John Doe, which as anyone who has ever watched any US crime or police drama will know is the name used to categorise unidentified male bodies – female bodes are called Jane Doe. The name probably derives from DOA – dead on arrival. As Jane and John are common names the bodies would have been tagged 'John' DOA. Eventually, that changed to the friendlier-sounding Doe.
As this John Doe is not dead, it is a little peculiar he decided to call himself that – a nice normal name like John Smith would have sufficed. Then again, Johnny from The Dead Zone got there first

■ Missing people – the Home Office estimates that about 210, 000 people are reported missing in the UK every year. Most return within 72 hours. The National Missing Persons Unit figures estimate 28,000 remain missing – two-thirds of whom are under 18. In the US 800,000 children a year are reported as missing and there are around 1.3million people on the streets as a result of running away and/or homelessness

Sky Digital

EVERYTHING YOU EVER WANTED TO KNOW ABOUT RECEIVING AND SUBSCRIBING

How to get Sky Digital

The easiest way to get Sky Digital is to call Sky on 08702 404040, pick your package using the table opposite, and book an installation. You must have a Digibox to get Sky Digital. The Sky Digibox receiver and mini-dish are free, although non-subscribers must pay a £120 installation charge. Otherwise, installation costs £50 if you take the top Sky World package, or £70 if you take any other package.

If you'd prefer to see a demo before you buy, see an independent satellite dealer or high street electrical shop. The likes of Dixons just pass on your details to Sky's installers, but if you visit an independent, you'll also be able to assess the people who'll fit the system.

It's possible to buy the mini-dish and Digibox outright for about £299 to avoid any contractual obligations to Sky, but you'll have to do this through an independent dealer.

Sky prefers to be paid by direct debit or a standing credit card order. If you choose to pay by cheque, there's a monthly surcharge of £4.

Watching the BBC, ITV, Channel 4, and Five by satellite

Previously, for copyright reasons, you needed a viewing card from the BBC to get these channels, but as of July 14 all BBC channels, including regional variations, will be FTA and can be picked up by anyone in the UK with any digital satellite receiver and a 60cm-plus dish in diameter pointed at Astra 2D. Thus, obtaining a free Digibox and mini-dish from Sky and paying the £120 installation fee for non-subscribers can get you all of the BBC channels as well as many other FTA channels (see Free-to-Air Channels From Abroad). ITV, Channel 4, and Five remain soft encrypted and so are only available to Sky subscribers or those who've previously obtained a non-subscription viewing card. ITV2 is only available to Sky subscribers.

The Sky Digital small print

The Sky Digital contract you sign contains rules you must adhere to. Remember the following:

CONNECTION: You must keep your Digibox connected to your dish, mains power and a working phone line in the UK or Irish Republic for the first 12 months of your contract. If you don't, Sky could block your viewing card or demand you pay the value of their subsidies, currently £220.

CHANGING CHANNELS: You can alter your subscription package at any time, but you must take it for at least a month before changing again.

CANCELLATION: Sky requires a month's notice for cancellation, but since you can't cancel until the end of the first year, you'll actually pay for a minimum of 13 months.

Box Office films and pay-per-view events

These are ordered using the Box Office button on your Sky Digital remote. You'll need to give your PIN number (the last four digits of the customer number on your viewing card). All films are now Multiplay – you can watch them as many times as you like for a day after your purchase, though in Sky's case this day ends at 6am.

Sky Plus – the premium choice

Sky Plus is a next-generation Sky Digibox, with two tuners and a PC-style hard disc drive. It can record the satellite signal direct to the hard disc with no loss of quality, and holds 20 hours of material on average. The twin tuners allow you to record on one channel while watching another, and you can also pause live TV, and fast-forward or reverse at up to 30 times' normal speed. Sky Plus costs £299 and requires a £10 monthly subscription to use its extra features, along with £50 to install a quad-output LNB on your dish.

Sky in more than one room

Every Sky Digibox has two UHF outputs, and a second TV in another room can be connected to one of these, along with a Remote Link (£10) which allows you to change channels from the second room. Alternatively, you can buy a wireless Videosender for £60-£100, which will send a high-quality picture and stereo audio up to 30m indoors and relay remote commands back to the Digibox. But if you want to watch two different channels in different rooms you'll have to buy a second Digibox for £99 (direct from Sky, or shop around for less), plus £50 to upgrade to a quad-output LNB. The second Digibox can be watched with a second subscription card costing £15/month.

Choosing your Digibox

The only way to choose which model of Digibox you use is to buy through an independent dealer, or secondhand. Dixons allows you to state a preference, and Sky In-Home Services will not offer a choice of receivers.

Extra and secret channels

There are no secret channels, hidden by Sky as a treat for those in the know. However, you can add extra ITV regions using the Add New Channels feature in the Services menu on 10.832GHz/H, 10.892GHz/H, and 10.906GHz/V (all SR 22000, FEC 5/6). New channels usually test for some time before joining the EPG, but if you find out the frequencies you can tune these in manually. There are also a dozen or so foreign channels on Eurobird which are too weak to be picked up with the mini-dish and which use odd symbol rates the Digibox cannot read.

Foreign channels

The old Sky analogue service shared the Astra 1 satellites at 19.2°E with dozens of German channels. Sky Digital broadcasts from Astra 2, 28.2°E, and Eurobird, 28.5°E, which were developed to give the UK a very large digital satellite capacity. There are no mainland European channels available through the basic Sky Digital system, but there are several Asian and Arabic services.

Sky Digital in Europe

Sky can't officially sell subscriptions to anyone living outside the UK or Irish Republic, and it is technically fraud to claim you're living in the UK or the Irish Republic to obtain a viewing card.

Legalities aside, thousands of people abroad use their friends' or relatives' addresses, and there's a profitable industry using real and bogus UK addresses to get viewing cards, which are sold around Europe at a premium.

Reception is a problem outside the UK, particularly for the ITV channels. You'll need a much larger dish to get reliable reception, although, reportedly, people as far away as Egypt and Morocco pick up Sky Digital.

Free-to-air channels from abroad

There are dozens of broadcast TV satellites orbiting over Europe, beaming thousands of free and encrypted channels, although only Astra 2 and Eurobird (at the 28.2°E/28.5°E position) can be picked up with the Sky Digital mini-dish and Digibox.

Two of the most important positions are Astra 1 at 19.2°E and Hot Bird at 13°E.

A 60cm dish can be used to pick up more than 60 free TV channels from Astra, while a 70cm dish will bag well over a hundred free signals from Hot Bird. The Sky Digibox has a limited symbol rate range (just 22000 or 27500), so we recommend buying a dedicated free-to-air receiver if you enjoy what you find.

The Digibox is also useless for watching encrypted channels from any foreign broadcaster, which will require a specialised receiver.

STANICE O

LOCATION: Astra 2, 28.2°E
FREQUENCY: 12.607GHz/H, SR 27500, FEC 3/4
PROFILE: Part of the partially encrypted Czech Link channel bouquet, this Czech music channel offers rock, pop and dance music videos and live gigs. Aimed mainly at the hipper music-lovers (think Blur and Slipknot rather than Will Young and Justin Timberlake), it is still required viewing for budding Eurovision songwriters wondering what informs East European tastes.

Sky prices and packages

There are six Sky Entertainment packages to meet different tastes and budgets, but the most common is the Family pack, which contains everything except the Sky Premium channels and the stand-alone Premium channels, and costs £18.50 a month.

- The Value Pack (£12.50/month) contains Sky One, Sky News, Discovery Home & Leisure, Bloomberg, and 10 Music Choice audio channels. For viewers in the Irish Republic, this package also contains RTE One, Network 2 and TG4.
- The Popular Mix pack (£15.50/month) provides Discovery, Nickelodeon, Cartoon Network, Fox Kids, Paramount, UK Gold, National Geographic, Living and the Value Pack channels.
- The Knowledge Pack (£15.50/month) provides Discovery, National Geographic, History, CNBC, UK Horizons, Animal Planet and the Value Pack channels.
- The Kids And Music Pack (£15.50/month) provides The Box, Cartoon Network, Fox Kids, MTV, MTV2, MTV Base, MTV Hits, Nickelodeon, Trouble, VH-1, VH-1 Classic, UK Play and the Value Pack channels.
- The Lifestyle Pack (£15.50/month) provides Bravo, Challenge, Granada Breeze, Men & Motors, Granada Plus, UK Drama, UK Style, Trouble and the Value Pack channels.

Note: Several channels have one-hour timeshift channels which we have not listed for reasons of space.

Sky premium channels

You can add the Sky premium channels Sky Sports 1 and 2 (together known as Sky Sports World), Sky Movies Premier and Sky Movies Max (together Sky Movie World) to any of the Entertainment packs. All four Sky premium channels are known as Sky World. With the Family Pack, these cost:

- Sky Movies Max or Sky Movies Premier, £28
- Sky Movie World, £33
- Sky Sports 1 or 2, £27
- Sky Sports World, £31
- Sky World, £38
- Sky Sports 1 or 2 & Sky Movies Max or Sky Movies Premier £32
- Sky Sports World & Sky Movies Max or Sky Movies Premier £34
- Sky Movieworld & Sky Sports 1 or 2 £35
- Any Sky premium selection with the Popular Mix, Knowledge, Kids And Music or Lifestyle packs cost £1 less, or £2 less with the Value Pack.

Bonus channels

Subscribers who take Sky Sports World get Sky Sports 3 free of charge. Subscribers to Sky Movie World get Sky Cinema and the Disney mini-package free.

Stand-alone premium channels

- Adult & Playboy TV £7.99
- Artsworld £6
- Chelsea TV £6
- Disney (Disney Channel, Playhouse Disney & Toon Disney) £5
- Film Four £7
- MUTV £6
- Music Choice Extra £5
- Star TV (Star Plus & Star News) £12
- Television X £7.99

Free channels

All BBC channels (including regional variations) are free-to-air on Astra 2D from July 14. If you subscribe to Sky or have a non-subscription viewing card, any ITV region can be added using the Add New Channels dialogue box in the Digibox's Services menu, using the following frequencies: 10.832GHz/H, 10.892GHz /H, 10.906GHz/V (all symbol rate 22000, FEC 5/6). There are now over 40 FTA digital TV channels and more than 50 radio channels from Astra 2 and Eurobird which can be picked up using a Sky Digital system without a viewing card. These are listed in Channel Check at the back of What Satellite & Digital TV.

MURDER BY NUMBERS

A young woman is found murdered in undergrowth in the woods. Cantankerous Cassie Mayweather (Sandra Bullock), an oddball cop with a violent past, is called in to investigate, and finds that something in the case chimes with her own experience.

The class she and new colleague (Ben Chaplin) pick up lead them to the lumpen janitor of a local college (Chris Penn). But Cassie – using her knowledge of forensic science and a gut feeling – realises that this is no random killing and that a trail has been meticulously laid to taunt the police.

A footprint cast indicates that rich, supercilious student Richard (Ryan Gosling) might be involved, but he has a watertight alibi. And how is Nietzsche-spouting nihilist Justin (Michael Pitt), a poor geek shunned by his peers, involved?

Is the perfect murder an art – one that only the privileged should enjoy? And how far should one go to avoid detection?

Director Barbet Schroeder serves up film-making by numbers here because the outcome is never in doubt in this update of the infamous real-life murder case of University of Chicago students Leopold and Loeb (previously dealt with to better effect in Hitchcock's Rope, as well as Compulsion, and Swoon).

Bullock gives another of her trademark excellent square-peg-in-round-hole performances. She's lovely; can't someone give her some more sympathetic roles?

– Deborah Stoverbury

THE WORLD'S BIGGEST GHOST HUNT

Living TV, 9pm

Living is becoming wall-to-wall paranormal programming lately. In this special Will Hanrahan presents a condensed version of the spooky events at Tutbury Castle on Walpurgis Night.

MEN BEHAVING BADLY

UK Gold, 11pm

Flat-sharing comedy with Martin Clunes and Neil Morrissey as slightly bad boys Gary and Tony. Pre-trout lips Lesley Ash and Caroline Quentin co-star as the only civilising force on these lager-swilling retards. Gross-out comedy at its best.

NOT ANOTHER TEEN MOVIE

Sky Box Office, every 60 minutes
A dopey but entertaining spoof of the legion of teen movies. You may not spot all the references – unless you've been watching teen films since before the days of Brat-Packers and the father of the genre, director John Hughes.

THE TONIGHT SHOW WITH JAY LENO

FTN, 9pm
The big-chinned wonder has established himself as one of the most recognisable TV faces in the US – can he conquer the UK too? Leno's guest list is subject to whatever is happening this week.

THE SENTINEL

Sci-Fi, 6pm

Start of the second series of the peculiar semi-paranormal buddy drama. Blair and Jim are still cosily co-habiting (all so very innocently) and helping each other solve strange crimes.

BEHIND THE SCENE: X-MEN 2: X-MEN UNITED

E! Entertainment, 6.30pm

A look at what made the X-Men sequel such a spectacular piece of cinema. Expect E! Entertainment's usual glossy treatment and reverence. Gasp and cheer at behind-the-scenes revelations.

CUT

Sci-Fi, 10pm
Kylie Minogue and ex-Brat-Pack star Molly Ringwald head the cast of this sub-Scream slasher horror.
A killer is stalking the cast of a low-budget horror – if only. That Wes Craven has a lot to answer for.

THAT 70S SHOW

THE ULTIMATE CROCODILE

National Geographic, 9pm
The Nile crocodile has been around since the time of the dinosaur – and the population is on the increase. A study of one of the most successful natural survivors and feared predators on the planet.

KATH AND KIM WEEKEND

FTN, 10.50pm
Suburban Australia, as seen in Neighbours, only with a decidedly acerbic twist. There is affection in the portrayal of no-hoper mother and daughter Kath and Kim, but the comedy is occasionally very cruel.

DAWSON'S CREEK

E4, 9pm

Dawson (James Van Der Beek) returns from Los Angeles and is reunited with Joey (Katie Holmes). Meanwhile, Pacey (Josh Jackson) and Audrey (Busy Philipps) bring home Audrey's childhood friend Jack Osbourne.

LOST IN LA MACHA

BBC Four

Ex-Python Terry Gilliam's films have a history of over-running and costing more than they were supposed to, so the chaos surrounding the Don Quixote movie is hardly surprising. It does make an excellent story, though.

BIG BROTHER NOMINATIONS UNCUT

E4, 7pm

The whole, long drawn-out nomination process. As it's uncut there's little room for any conspiracy theories about rigging. By now it should be fairly clear where everyone's loyalties lie.

HIDDEN GENDERS

National Geographic, 11pm

A programme our friend Alan Partridge would probably get very excited about – this focuses on the ladyboys of Thailand, the Hirjras of India, and other assorted Asian cross-dressers and trans-sexuals. Fascinating creatures, as Alan would say.

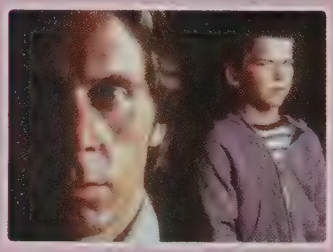
BO SELECTA

E4, 10pm

Avid Merrion is probably the most famous redhead in the country at the moment – he's funnier and, if possible, stranger than Chris Evans, less fierce than Anne Robinson, and he's got his own show. You will like him – he is warm.



AMERICAN GOTHIC

Sky One, 10pm

Poor little Caleb has a bit of an odd and traumatic life, what with visits from his dead sister, Merlyn, and the creepy attention of Sheriff Buck (possibly the devil and very likely Caleb's dad), played by Gary Cole.

SEVENTH HEAVEN

Hallmark, 11am

Barry Watson stars as the eldest son in this family drama. Watson was also in Sorority Boys (alongside Harland Williams and Michael Rosenbaum) but he is more attractive here, out of drag.

THE BROTHERS KARAMAZOV

TCM, 3pm

It's Yul Brynner's birthday (he was born in 1915 and died in 1985), and to mark the occasion TCM is showing this. Marilyn Monroe was interested in the part eventually played by Maria Schell (right). William Shatner's in it too!

TV Choices

CHARMED FINALE DAY

Living TV, from 10.30am

Showing the first and last episodes from series one to five and all the series finales. All the best of Prue, Phoebe, Piper and Paige. You also get to see behind the scenes – truly, Living TV is really spoiling you.

DIAGNOSIS MURDER WEEKEND

Hallmark, from 8am

Real-life father and son Dick and Barry Van Dyke play a doctor and policeman who team up to fight crime. Entertainingly cheesy detective drama – but it's usually obvious who did it. It's always the charming young woman!

LOVE AND DEATH DAY

TCM, from 1pm

As part of the Crime Wave season, TCM has a day devoted to crimes of passion and love. Gaslight, Dog Day Afternoon (starring Al Pacino, above), Key Largo, the original Ocean's 11, and Outrage are the highlights.

THE GLASS HOUSE

Sky Movies Premier, 9.45pm

Lacklustre thriller as ungrateful whelp Leelee Sobieski (above) and her brother get taken in by a wealthy couple after their parents' death. Is there something to worry about or is she just being a brat?

MEN IN BLACK II

Sky Box Office, every 15 minutes
Tommy Lee Jones and Will Smith return as the galaxy defenders with the cool suits. This time they are joined by a smart-talking dog (which is less traumatic than it sounds). Rosario Dawson plays the maid in need of protection.

JUSTICE LEAGUE

CNX, 6pm/8.10pm
Colourful, stylised superhero adventures – and where else can you see Batman, Superman, Wonder Woman and The Flash hanging out together? Michael Rosenbaum voices The Flash. Lex Luthor (Clancy Brown) also appears.

TV Choices

HE-MAN AND THE MASTERS OF THE UNIVERSE

CNX, 12.30pm
By the grace of Greyskull, he has the power, but he also isn't wearing a lot, so he must get chilly. The ultra-masculine He-Man strikes a blow for muscle-men everywhere. Actually, it's all a bit camp.

BRIDE OF CHUCKY

Front Row, every 120 minutes
The best of the Child's Play films, with a thick, dark streak of humour running through. Brad Dourif voices the slightly battered Chucky, and Jennifer Tilly is his unfortunate bride. Alexis Arquette is amusing as one of their victims.

TV Choices

TRAINING DAY

Sky Movies Premier, 10pm
Denzel Washington plays cynical narcotics cop Alonso Harris, showing rookie Jake Hoyt (Ethan Hawke) the rules. Look out for Macy Gray and Snoop Dogg in cameos. Disappointing drama (considering that Washington won an Oscar).

THE MALTESE FALCON

TCM, 1.20pm
Humphrey Bogart is the tough-talking Sam Spade, discovering that dames (in the shape of Mary Astor) aren't always to be trusted. Peter Lorre smells of gardenias, and Sydney Greenstreet and Elisha Cook Jr also smell a bit peculiar.

TV Choices

ATLANTIS: THE LOST EMPIRE

The Disney Channel, 4pm
Michael J Fox provides the voice for hero Milo, in this Disney re-imagining of the Atlantis legend. The land is still intact, but it's beneath the sea – can Milo and his intrepid crew discover the Lost Continent and save the day?

TAKESHI'S CASTLE

Challenge?, 10.30am/8.30pm
Craig Charles provides a voiceover for the bizarre Japanese It's A Knockout-style game show. It's far tougher and more cruel than the jollity of the old Jeux Sans Frontiers, and there's no Eddie Waring or Stuart Hall.

TV Choices

FIREFLY

Sci-Fi, 9pm

World premiere of the episode Heart of Gold – the series was cancelled in the United States before this one was shown. Adam Baldwin, Nathan Fillion, and Gina Torres star as the space cowboys.

THE KILLER

CNX, 10pm

Chow Yun-Fat is the killer with a conscience and Danny Lee is the police detective (fascinated, and maybe a little in love with his quarry) trying to track him down. One of the best heroic bloodshed movies, directed by John Woo.

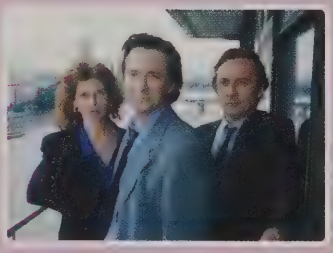
THE WEST WING

E4, 9pm

Terrorism is on the agenda this series, and Sam's political ambitions also come to the forefront. How will the administration deal with with all the upheavals, and still cope with day-to-day problems?



BETWEEN THE LINES

UK Drama, 9pm

TV Choices

VAN WILDER: PARTY LIAISON

Sky Box Office

Ryan Reynolds stars as the rich kid trying to extend his college career (he's been there seven years) and make it pay. His 'fund-raiser' parties might be legendary, but his slacker lifestyle is not exactly impressing his father.

DALLAS

UK Gold, 4.30pm

Long before he was a big-screen mega-star, a very young Brad Pitt made a few guest appearances in this – he plays Randy. The episode was first aired in 1988, when Brad was only 24. Patrick Duffy and Larry Hagman star.

TV Choices

TEXAS RANGERS

Front Row, every 120 minutes
Dawson's Creek star James Van Der Beek heads the cast in this dramatic Western very vaguely based on true events. Rachael Leigh Cook and Ashton Kutcher also star in this teen-aimed look at the Wild West.

SOUL SURVIVORS

Film Four, 10pm
With such a fantastic cast – Eliza Dushku, Luke Wilson, Wes Bentley (American Beauty) and Ben Affleck's brother Casey – you may expect a lot from this. You will be very disappointed. Melissa Sagemiller (Sorority Boys) stars.

GHOSTBUSTERS

Sky Movies Premier, 10.35pm
Three college professors decide to set up as freelance ghostbusters after they lose their jobs. Bill Murray, Dan Aykroyd and Harold Ramis try not to cross the streams. Sigourney Weaver is Bill's love interest.

EXTREME GHOSTBUSTERS

Toon Disney, 7pm
The Real Ghostbusters, only more so. The characters may be a little on the politically correct side, but it's all done with the best of intentions. Egon, Janine and Slimer are the only survivors from the original team.

INSTALLATION IS ALL IMPORTANT

Quality installation is what we have built our reputation on. In fact, our engineers are frequently called out to repair and even re-install systems fitted by other self professed experts. Buy a digital satellite system from D&C and you receive quality equipment and quality installation, ensuring optimum performance & trouble free operation. To back up our pledge, our installations are fully guaranteed and are inclusive of parts AND labour for 12 months. We only use the best materials & our engineers have years of experience.

UK WIDE INSTALLATION

We have teams of Engineers who install all types of satellite systems throughout the UK

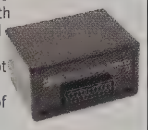
RGB to S-Video Convertor



RGB is a great for sending video, with picture resolution as good as S- and much better than composite video. Trouble is, not everything can accept an RGB signal. Problem solved! This box converts the RGB scart output of Sky Digital/ITV Digital boxes, and DVD players, into S-video. Ideal for making high resolution connections to AV amps, S-VHS/D-VHS recorders and plasma screens. Order [RGB2S] £59.99

Scart distribution amp

One input to five outputs, fully buffered using broadcast grade video amplification ICs. Pin 8 is routed through (input goes high, all outputs go high) and every pin connection is carried through for composite, S-video and RGB compatibility. Robust metal case. Ideal for displaying one signal on multiple TVs or making up to five simultaneous copies from one source. Mains adaptor included. Order [SDA] £89.99

NEW! Scart Commander 4:1 scart switchbox

A high quality AV switcher from Keene, designed to allow connection of multiple sources to one display, all via scart connections. With 4 video, 2 audio, 2 data and 2 control channels it can handle component, composite, s-, and RGB video, even digital audio (with the correctly configured cable). Inputs can be selected manually (by IR remote, included, or push button) or automatically via auto signal detect. Use a single switchbox to switch any of four inputs to one output, or two units may be used together in a master/slave arrangement providing 7:1 switching. Visual LED indication of selected output. Programmable default input auto selected on power up. Separate mains adaptor for improved mains isolation. Solid metal case for enhanced screening.
[KSC] £149.99 Twin pack (7:1 switching) [KSCT] £249.99

2CI 120 GbSat a World Beater?... we think so.

Few receivers have excited us like the GbSat range, and the 2CI 120 is no exception. The build, quality & tuner sensitivity has consistantly bettered other high end and more expensive brands, but to call these receivers affordable is an understatement, especially when you remember that the receivers feature a standard 3 Year warranty and this is the only PVR we have tested that has two way USB, more on this later....

We tested the receiver on the weakest signals. NITV Iran was receivable on an 85cm dish, and on hooking it up to a larger dish we were locking stations we had never seen before. All the tests were particularly easy because the GbSat 2CI 120 came pre-installed with over 3800 Channels on 28 different satellites.

Another nice feature of the receiver was USALS as well as DiSEqC 1.2, which meant that all we did to install it was insert our Longitude and Latitude into the USALS menu and find the first satellite on the GbSat HH120 Mount, making all other satellites instantly available. Suppliers HISAT even supply a Video, which takes you through each part of the installation process step by step. So simple even the proverbial child could do it.

When we started to play with the PVR (Personal Video Recorder) side of the receiver our smiles got even bigger, our test model had a huge selection of MP3's already installed, apparently it's possible to store 20,000 average length MP3's on the HDD, although you'll probably use it partly for that and partly for TV.

Recording TV was easy, pressing the record and OK button initiated the recording process. Once the programme was finished it was just a matter of pressing stop and playing back the feature or renaming the recording. Another way to record was to use the EPG and initiating the record feature from there. This will let you set up once daily, monthly or weekly recordings, useful for soaps now the BBC and soon ITV can be seen in the clear. We then moved the file we had saved to the hard drive of our PC via the afforementioned USB. We used third party software to quickly convert the file to *.MPG and from *.MPG we found we could make a DVD! The same software can convert your home videos into PVR files for playback on the GbSat - all these processes are 100% digital so the net result was a quality DVD. Radio files were recorded and saved as MP3's, optionally you can move MP3's, WAV files or video files to the receiver, again using the USB.

All in all we have never found an HDD receiver as flexible, receivers retailling for 100's of pounds more are no where near as good.

We tested the recevier with all the modules that we had to hand, this included everything ever advertised in the pages of What Satellite TV, not surprisingly the receiver worked flawlessly with everything.

It's hard to find anything bad to say about the GbSat 2CI 120. The handset is not so flashy as some but it's functional and easy to use and hey who wants to look at the handset when the receiver itself and the pictures it can produce are the best we've ever seen. We highly recommend this receiver. If you want something this feature packed, buy it, you can't go wrong.

Inside Information on Satellite TV

Plus: (optional extra) "The Secret World of Satellite TV"
Plus an in-depth unbiased report on UK adult channels on Sky Digital and cable TV

- Decoding digital & non digital satellite channels
- How smart cards work & how they are "hacked"
- No subscription satellite TV - all the options
- The real unbiased truth about pirate cards
- Extra channels at no extra cost
- Digital satellite vs Freeview digital
- Euro Digital vs Sky Digital

These are just a few of the topics covered in our "Satellite TV Expert" package. For more details see our web site:

BLASTS FROM THE PAST

Over the years What Satellite & Digital TV has tested more satellite receivers, decoders, dishes and home cinema gear than you can shake a stick at.

If you've missed that vital test, or want to upgrade your system, our Test Reprint service can provide you with a photocopy of any article from What Satellite & Digital TV since its inception.

The date of testing for current equipment can be found in the Buyer's Guide.

To order, fill in the coupon, adding details of your requirements, enclose a cheque or postal order for £3 per reprint (made payable to Highbury-WV) and a stamped, self-addressed envelope, and send it to What Satellite & Digital TV Reprints, Highbury-WV, 53-79 Highgate Road, London NW5 1TW (please allow 28 days for delivery).

Digital Satellite TV

Evolved from the famous Ku-band Satellite TV series of books, this 486-page tome is crammed full of background information, and technical details on all aspects of satellite TV – both digital and analogue – with pretty much everything you need in the way of theory, installation and troubleshooting of satellite systems. An indispensable guide to satellite TV technology.

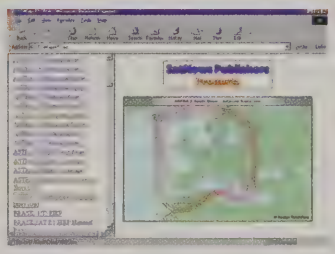
UK £36 • Rest of Europe £42 • Worldwide £47

Classic Black Book

The 'bible' of the black art of signal security, European Scrambling Systems is principally concerned with analogue scrambling systems, but is still of interest today to anyone interested in how scrambling and encryption systems are set up and knocked down by illicit 'hackers'. This 576-page book is packed with technical data, circuit diagrams, software listings, tables and photos with details on hacks of scrambling systems for PAL, Mac and the DirecTV DSS American digital network.

UK £34 • Rest of Europe £35 • Worldwide £39

SatMaps Footprints CD-Rom



On CD-Rom for both PC and Mac, SatMaps is a simple collection of satellite footprints – essential to work out which signals you can receive with your dish. Place the disc in your computer, double-click on an icon and away you go. Each footprint can be viewed, printed or downloaded for use in other software. From Afristar to Turksat, over 600 footprints of broadcast satellites around the world are here. SatMaps requires either Microsoft Explorer or Netscape Communicator installed as the default internet application in your computer.

UK, Europe and Rest of World £29

TAPS FOR THE FALLEN

Roger Bunney searches the skies every month for sightings and news snippets for motorised dish enthusiasts

As military action across Iraq drew to a close and the forces began a peacekeeping role to help establish a democratic environment, so there has been a gradual winding down of the military presence and the media corps that has covered the campaign.

The copious satellite coverage of recent weeks has similarly dwindled, as many broadcasters withdraw most of their news teams. A quick check over the 10°E Eutelsat W1 bird on May 1 showed that the major news groups, eg, APTN, were maintaining essential feed capacity from Baghdad, Kuwait, Qatar, and Doha for breaking news. I noticed APTN Baghdad Path 1 on April 24 feeding TVN CHILE-BAGHDAD (W1, 10.958GHz/V, SR 4167, 5/6) but carrying an edited VTR package.

Edmund Spicer (Littlehampton) found very strong signals on his 80cm dish at the end of April over Europe*Star 1, 45°E at 12.646GHz/V (5632, 3/4), with live pictures of traffic in central Baghdad – carried over the Reuters Baghdad #2 uplink. And more live pictures of a very large aircraft carrier docking via the CNN NEWSSOURCE feeder over NSS-7, 21°W (11.563GHz/H, 6117, 3/4, on April 26) turned out to be an outside broadcast coverage feed via KGMB-TV ch.9 Honolulu naval base and not from the Arabian Gulf fleet.

A final thought on the recent campaign relates to another CNN NEWSOURCE live feed on April 30. The venue was the Fort Stewart, Georgia, base of the 3rd Infantry Division. This division, as in previous wars over the past century, has suffered more losses than most. Relations of the fallen were gathered for a memorial service. A lone young woman sang patriotic songs to the gathered families and their comrade soldiers. In the centre of the parade field, beneath a large fluttering stars and stripes, was the poignant focus of this emotional ceremony. On raise podiums were pairs of boots, each with an upturned rifle and the infantryman's helmet – still in desert camouflage – over the stock. Each display represented a lost soldier from the Operation Iraqi Freedom. I have included a selection of pictures taken during the Iraqi conflict – all live off-air.

Fox's Geraldo Rivera was never far from the action, despite being dropped from the US Army's approved list – the gung-ho reporter wasn't afraid of frontline reporting or sitting surrounded by explosives; a Saddam statue gives its last wave before demolition; a TV crew rehearses at night outside the Palestine Hotel in Baghdad

The CNN NEWSOURCE feeder on NSS-7 is noted for relaying breaking news from across the US that is being carried by any of CNN's affiliates. On April 20 from about 5pm on the 11.563GHz/H slot, heli-pix showed a very large warehouse building in a wooded environment, and a large number of police cars apparently in a stand-off. The centre of attention was a red van in the middle of the nearby car park.

Eventually, the driver emerged and appeared to be in a discussion with the law enforcers. He was eventually detained. The story runs that he has abducted someone and was then pursued by police and captured in Stanislaus County, Reading, Pennsylvania. The victim was released unharmed.

On May 3 on Eutelsat 10°E (10.987GHz/V, 4167, 5/6) BILGE NEWS AGENCY/APTN ANKARA uplinked live pictures from earthquake-shaken south-east Turkey as orange-coated rescue workers and large excavators dragged concrete and rubble from the collapsed remains of a school. Workers paused as a small boy's body was removed to an ambulance, given a blessing and identification, then driven away. The workers resumed, seen in profile against distant mountains as the sky turned dark and floodlights switched on – there were still lost children and the search continued through the night.

Earlier, on April 9 on W1 (11.142GHz/H, 6111, 3/4) Roy Carman saw highlights of the Rally of Turkey. This was high-speed racing in exceptionally beautiful but rugged terrain. The uplink site used the GCR/FLY service ident. Atlantic Bird 1 at 12°W is a very active satellite, carrying transatlantic content on the West-East path.

What must have been the shortest corporate feed ever took place on April 14, with an identification 'WCOM-ASHBU' appearing over the Globecast bouquet 11.014GHz/H (20145, 3/4 on channel 1). The caption 'MCI' (for MCI Communications Corporation) appeared, followed by the presenter fumbling at great length with his earpiece talkback feed – apparently the audio was very low-level. Eventually, the corporate feed – or rather statement – ran for perhaps five minutes only. Points made included news that no further job losses were likely this coming year – then the feed ended. Most unusual.

A new arrival, incidentally, within this same Globecast bouquet is the RTV-1 channel from Moscow, which seems to run full-time and appeared towards the end of April. It was still present in early May. Stefan Hagedorn also advises us that recent news feeds have appeared on AB-1 at 11.162; .170; .672 and 12.723GHz/all H with SR6111, FEC3/4.

Under fire: Bahrain TV captures a blazing US Army transport, with soldiers sheltering in the foreground; a brave soldier runs to move a second vehicle away from the blaze; mine tanks and AFCs make great viewing for 'warmography' fans

The Telecom 2D slot at 8°W is a favoured hunting ground for Granada regional TV inserts for Meridian/HTV/Anglia within the 12.570-12.600GHz/H patch. Checking the other end of the 8°W Telecom band in mid-April, I discovered several French regional offerings – this seems a regular spot for TV Française action.

DSNG ANVES appeared at 12.741GHz/H (6117, 3/4) – is this a town, I wonder (?), while a little lower at 12.719GHz (6117, 3/4) appeared GCP OCC4 – Globecast Occasional circuit ch.4 – but the content was rather alarming.

The reporter was seen at a chemical plant: chimneys billowing white smoke, storage tanks and piles of drums with stored chemicals, ground-level ponds of mysterious liquid – in all, it was obviously a very active industrial environment. The picture then cut to a house and garden, where the owner was pointing at plants that looked rather exhausted and limp. The shot widened to reveal the same chemical plant in the background. The video package finished at a laboratory dealing with measuring pollution. This could well have been a re-shoot of the movie Erin Brockovich!

Pedal-racing bike anoraks would have enjoyed a series of races at Rennes, France, that F3 OUEST-6MB carried (with interesting parameters of 12.721GHz/H (4218, 7/8) on April 27.

The next day Roy Carman (Dorking) dialled up Telecom 2D 8°W and at 11.631GHz/V (6111, 3/4) FLAVIA-1EA was uplinking pictures of a spectacular street carnival from a Swiss city. Streets were full of colour, carnival floats, horses, and the locals having a jolly good time. Flowers and decorations marked the arrival of spring. An hour-long parade converged on an open area where there was a bonfire with a snowman on top! There were speeches, more fun, and then the bonfire was lit.

Alhough the ITV regionals have vacated Intelsat 801, several French regionals still use the 31°W slot, however, and curiously one late afternoon BREST was being uplinked using MPEG 4:2:2, content being the CNN NEWSOURCE caption (11.020GHz/V, 5632, 3/4)! On the same Bank Holiday Monday TES-38 was uplinking prize awards from the MSA British Touring Car Championships, sponsored by Green Flag Motoring Assistance. The signals were in the clear a little lower at 10.999GHz/V (5632, 3/4).

We have a real analogue sighting now; Edmund Spicer had a weak PAL promo on the Scandinavian beam from Sirius 3 at 5°E 12.437GHz/V with audio 6.50MHz – to lock the picture threshold extension down to a 13MHz bandwidth had to be used.

Eutelsat's II F2 at 48°E is a difficult bird to catch, having a wide inclined orbit of nearly 3°. Alan Dayle (Nottingham) checked this slot in late April and found that cable channel SET 11.611GHz/H (2290, 2/3) was – on the day monitored – providing a good signal, whereas other cable head-end feeds were dismally low-level. Data is also carried over this satellite which can be easily seen – check the following: 11.156/H (11158, 7/8); 11.058-V (26034, 5/6); 12.550/V; 12.590/V; 12.628-V (all 27500+3/4), and finally 12.581/V (27900, 7/8).

Just down the road at Europe*Star 45°E, Alan found SNG CAPETOWN at 11.30pm on April 27, running a Sunday God Channel event with a rather tired-looking technical crew. This appeared at 11.523GHz/V (5632, 3/4). The day before he found 45°E running motorbike racing from an unidentified circuit at 11.513GHz/V (6111, 3/4) with service ident CWC/GCA/DB4.

Two of our readers have reported on erotic adult programming and, for the record, the details are Hot Bird at 13°E – Superpippa Channel at 11.200GHz/V (27500, 3/4).

Early transmissions have been seen in the clear – check its site at: www.superpippa.com for more info. SESAT at 36°E and the Bosnia/Herzegovinia OBN channel have been carrying (late April) Saturday night Playboy entertainment before midnight – these are described as 'arty' images/turn of the (20th) century pictures, though it is uncertain if these are sepia photographic stills or piano-accompanied movies – to satisfy your curiosity or lust tune to 12.699GHz/H (4340, 2/3).

Mention of Hot Bird and the 13°E slot is usually associated with Eutelsat's downlink entertainment programming, however, within the Hot Bird downlinked spectrum can be found several news feeder channels. RR Communications has just opened another bouquet and can be found on both 12.210GHz and 12.220GHz/H (6161, 3/4). The 12.110 bouquet airs a promo identing 'RR FEED 1' and during the Iraqi conflict it carried many edited packages of that war.

During the fighting in April an Arabic feed on RR revealed (as our correspondent writes) pretty graphic and not-for-the-squeamish pictures of charred and bloodied dead bodies filmed in close-up, with the camera zooming in and out on the worst injuries. A studio discussion in Arabic followed, though to whom the programming was directed wasn't apparent.

The image standard was awful, with compression, pixellation and well below VHS long-play recording quality, which blurred much of the horrific content ■

COMPLETE GUIDE TO EURO DIGITAL CHANNELS

Although the Astra craft at 19.2°E and 28.2°E are the highest profile satellites in the skies above the UK, there are many more providing TV channels. More than 40 provide thousands of digital stations, plus newsfeeds across Europe. This guide gives you all the details needed in order to tune in to them using fixed dish, dual-feed or multi-satellite systems.

For each satellite we have displayed the regular TV channels transmitted, plus the more dependable sources of news feeds. For each transponder (broadcasting frequency) we list the bouquet name, frequency and polarity, transponder number, encryption type, symbol rate and forward error correction (FEC) rate. These tuning details can either be manually entered into your receiver or are automatically found using some systems.

We also list two approximate minimum dish sizes for the South (London) and North (Edinburgh) to give you an idea of the strength of the signal. Remember that your own particular location, LNB type and even weather may also affect your ability to receive the channel. For each channel we show its name, a description, and main language.

■ All listings believed correct at the time of going to press. If you have a correction, e-mail it to us marked Channel Check or post it to us at the usual address.

Topp that!

Every month, Dr Matthew Holbrook keeps an ear to the skies for news of satellite radio

It's been a frustrating time of late for radio listeners on Sky Digital. There's a growing list of stations broadcasting off the EPG, and there have been incidents of channels going offline, only to reappear a few days later, and A-PID changes have started again. Teds FM and Topps FM (www.toppstiles.co.uk) are normally to be found on Atlantic Bird 2 at 8°W. At the time of writing they were also broadcasting on Eurobird 1 using 11.623GHz/H, SR 27500, FEC 2/3, A-PIDs 2334 and 2335 respectively. In addition, LBC Radio and Sikh channel Amrit Bani could be found testing on 12.324GHz/V and 11.585GHz/H.

Since last month's column Century Digital and Capital FM have joined the EPG on channels 924 and 925, whilst Sukh Sagar and Asian Gold vanished for a few days due to 'technical reasons'.

Listeners with free-to-air receivers may have been greeted with the sound of silence on 12.344GHz/H in recent weeks.

Twenty-one of the 27 radio channels on this transponder have had their A-PIDs raised by six digits. Only UCB Europe, UCB Inspirational, UCB Bible, UCB Talk, SBN, and Cross Rhythms Radio remain as they were. The A-PID for Sky Channel Line-up on 12.207GHz/V has also changed – from 2325 to 2313. Finally on Sky Digital, the BBC has been simulcasting all of its radio channels on Astra 2D transponders 10.773GHz/H and 10.803GHz/H. But with an ITC ruling not expected until June, the BBC has delayed its planned move to free-to-air broadcasting.

Topps FM: on the move

There have been lots of changes again to the radio line up at 13°E. Starting with some of the Arabic channels, transponder 12.654GHz/H has seen Radio Oman FM (www.oman-tv.gov.om/fmeng) starting on A-PID 1722, with El-Quran El-Karim moving from A-PID 1722 to 1522. Radio Sumer is new on 12.597GHz/V, A-PID 2173 and Emarat FM (www.emi.co.ae/radio/emarat_fm.htm) has started on 12.380GHz/V, A-PID 3533. Two Swedish channels have started – Radio Pink (www.rtvpink.com) on 12.476GHz/H, A-PID 0302 and Radio Kiss on 12.245GHz/H, A-PID 0295. Radio Balkan is new on 12.692GHz/H, A-PID 0106.

CRI (China Radio International – www.cri.com.cn) has appeared on TPS transponder 11.034GHz/V, SR 1807, FEC 3/4, A-PID 0631.

The German Hit Mix FM (www.hitfm.de) is new on 12.220GHz/H, SR 6161, FEC 3/4, A-PID 2113. And Interradio (www.interradio.com) has started on the same frequency using A-PID 7201.

RMC Info has relocated from 10.911GHz/V to 10.873GHz/V. SuperSport FM 94.6 on 10.930GHz/H is now encrypted in Irdeto and Radio Romania Actualitati on 11.623GHz/V has changed its A-PID from 0257 to 0266.

Just one change on Astra 1 at 19.2°E, ADR station Oldie FM on 10.964GHz/H, subcarrier 6.12MHz has changed its name to R.SA.

Please note that we will no longer be able to include the ADR listings every month in Radio Channel Check because of the continuing pressure on space ■

If you'd like to get in touch, please visit my website at: www.matthewholbrook.com

GUIDE TO RADIO CHANNELS

Satellite receivers spend most of their time tuned to TV but there is also an abundance of radio stations transmitted from the same satellites and receivable using the same equipment. There are three broadcasting formats for satellite radio – digital, analogue and Astra Digital Radio (ADR). Digital and analogue radio are receivable on digital and analogue (respectively) TV receivers, and ADR requires a special receiver and these are not widely available in the UK. ADR is only available on the Astra 1 satellites (please note that due to pressure on space ADR listings may not be included) ■

Choosing a satellite TV system is a confusing business. Here are a few guidelines to help out the first-time buyer

Buying a satellite TV system will involve you in a whole lot of choices, but you've made the right choice so far – to go for the wealth of entertainment available on satellite TV.

WHAT SYSTEM?

The first choice you must make is which type of satellite system to go for. It all depends on what you want to receive. Take a look in the Channel Check section of this magazine for an idea of which channels are broadcast from which satellites.

The cheapest and simplest satellite system uses a fixed dish to receive just the free channels from the Astra 1 satellites. This is what most people plump for – the ubiquitous 60cm dish (although an 80cm dish is needed in the north of England, the South-West, Scotland and Ireland). A Sky Digital system will not only receive the free and scrambled stations from Astra 2 and Eurobird at 28.2°E, it can also be used for free-to-air channels from some other satellites, with a suitable dish.

If you want to go the whole hog and receive all the channels that are available, you'll need a motorised multi-satellite system and think about receiving encrypted channels. These are more versatile, but also much more complicated and expensive than simple free-to-air systems.

Antennas come in a wide range of shapes and sizes, but you'll need a large dish for multi-satellite. A smaller dish is required for Sky Digital

WHAT MODEL?

In the following tables we list all the receivers currently available, separated into categories of fixed dish digital receivers, motorised digital receivers with traditional positioners built-in, and motorised receivers which use DiSEqC 1.2 software.

Mixed into all categories you'll find several combined receivers which can deal with both analogue and digital transmissions.

For each category and model there is a lot of information, much of which many buyers need not worry about. For a fixed dish digital receiver, look for plenty of channels, a Common Interface or built-in conditional access module, and DiSEqC 1.0 LNB switching.

If you want to receive channels on multiple satellites you'll need even more channels, but most importantly you'll need a built-in positioner or DiSEqC 1.2 software, depending on the type of motorisation you go for. One golden rule applies to any satellite system: don't rush out and buy the first model you see. Decide what you really need – both now and for the future – and consult this guide and your dealer for advice.

WHAT ABOUT INSTALLATION?

Whatever model you pick, the dish will have to be installed. You can do this yourself, but it's a task for the DIY-competent only.

Satellite receivers vary from the dirt cheap to all-singing, all-dancing models like the Echostar DVR7000, which has analogue and digital facilities, plus a hard disc drive for recording in digital quality

A typical simple Astra installation will cost between £40 and £80 and will take a professional anything from 30 minutes to a couple of hours to install.

A multi-satellite installation is a far more complex task (and therefore much less suitable for trying yourself) and will cost you anything from £200 upwards.

WHAT TO ASK?

Unless you know a fair amount about satellite TV already, it's probably wise to buy your system from a dealer, rather than through mail order. Visit as many satellite dealers as you can, and try to see every possible system in use. Have a go yourself.

If you don't like the way a receiver operates, it's better to find out in the shop than in your lounge after you've bought the wrong model. Don't be afraid to ask questions. Ask about other models, why the system on offer is right for you and why it's better than the others available.

Check the price of the receiver and the installation – some shops appear to offer a bargain on the equipment but cash in on the installation charges.

Make sure you are being offered the right size dish for your area – even though a 60cm dish may work all right in Penzance on a fine day, the picture will suffer when it rains.

If you intend to subscribe to any foreign channels, think about arranging it through the same dealer you buy your system from – you may qualify for a discount.

WHAT NEXT?

Once you've selected your satellite TV system and had it fitted, and the installer has shown you the basics, there's nothing more you have to do.

Watching satellite TV is then as easy as watching the five channels of terrestrial TV you're already used to.

FIXED DISH DIGITAL RECEIVERS

Key to fixed dish Sky Digital receivers

Known as the Sky Digibox, these receivers are the only way to pick up both the Sky subscription channels and channels from the BBC, ITV, Channel 4 and Five. All Sky Digiboxes have an integrated Videoguard conditional access module, and support the OpenTV software used for interactive TV and the electronic programme guide. The remote controls are interchangeable for all Digiboxes except Sky Plus, which has extra recording and playback controls

RECEIVER PRICE: Prices are for guidance only. Individual retailers may decide their own price, and What Satellite & Digital TV cannot be held responsible for market prices

MONTHLY SUBSCRIPTION: Sky Plus requires an extra monthly subscription to take advantage of its digital recording features

NUMBER OF LNB INPUTS: Two LNB inputs are useful for watching one channel while recording another, or receiving two different satellites without external switching

LNB LOOPTHROUGH: IF signal from dish can be passed to a second receiver while this unit is in standby

22KHZ SWITCHING: Universal-type LNBs are switched between high and low reception bands with a 22kHz tone from the receiver

POLARISER CONTROL: Polarisers are controlled by pulse (servo motor), current (magnetic), or voltage (combined LNB/polariser used in universal LNBs). Only current and pulse control allow skew adjustment for multi-satellite upgrading

SYMBOL RATE: The data rate varies from transponder to transponder, according to the level of compression and number of channels. Low symbol rates are used by news feeds with a single channel (SCPC or Single Channel Per Carrier), but most transponders on Astra, Eurobird and Hot Bird work on 22000 and 27500

FEC: Digital channels use differing Forward Error Correction rates (redundant information signals added to help receivers recognise and correct errors in transmission). Most receivers detect FEC automatically (A), but selectable FEC (S) can be useful for pinning down weak signals

HARD DISC SIZE: Measured in Gigabytes, this does not reflect recording capacity, which depends on the level of compression used for each recording

MODEM: Used to inform Sky of any Box Office events purchased, or for registering with some interactive services and downloading extra information. A faster modem will supply faster downloads.

NUMBER AV OUTPUTS: For direct connection via Scart cable to a TV or VCR for superior picture and sound

S-VIDEO OUTPUT: A dedicated S-video mini-DIN output connects to your TV or VCR for superior picture

STEREO AUDIO OUTPUTS: Phono sockets supplying left and right analogue audio channels, along with any Dolby Pro-Logic surround signals

DIGITAL AUDIO OUTPUT: For noise-free audio, either a coaxial link (c) or an optical link (O)

DOLBY DIGITAL: Receivers which can pass the AC-3 encoded signal via their digital audio output will produce superior Dolby Digital surround sound with a suitably-equipped audio amplifier

NUMBER UHF OUTPUTS: Extra outputs can be used to supply TVs in other rooms

UHF TUNING RANGE: Tuning the channel which a receiver 'broadcasts' to via the aerial lead. Larger ranges avoid crowding and interference between several receivers or VCRs

TESTED: Date of the What Satellite & Digital TV issue with a review of the receiver. Most will also be found in the following year's Book Of Tests

Key to digital video recorders

The recording complement to digital TV, DVRs can store video, audio and data on a computer-type hard disc drive, which enables instant access, simultaneous read-and-write, and many other features a VCR can't emulate. DVRs can be combined with a digital satellite receiver, digital terrestrial TV tuner, analogue TV tuner, or even with DVD players/ recorders and VCRs. They're most useful in tandem with an electronic programme guide rather than a VCR-style manual timer – this is known as a personal video recorder, or PVR.

HARD DISC CAPACITY AND RECORDING QUALITY LEVELS: Increasing the level of data compression increases the amount which can be stored on the disc, but reduces picture and sound quality; Sky's compression system changes dynamically to maximise both compression and quality

MP3 PLAYBACK: Audio files or radio channels can be stored in a very small space using MP3 compression, so you can play back audio as well as video

BACKGROUND RECORDING: Watch from the hard disc while your DVR records live TV

LIVE TV CACHE: The DVR continually records (up to a fixed amount), so users can jump back fast to anywhere in the programme

PAUSE RECORDING: The DVR starts recording as soon as you press Pause

TWIN TUNERS: The DVR can record two channels at once or record one channel while another is being watched live

USB PORT: Transfers audio and video files to a PC, or vice-versa

ETHERNET: Connects to a home network or broadband internet

Key to fixed dish digital receivers (Page 174)

This category lists digital receivers used for receiving MPEG-2 channels. To watch such channels you require a DVB-compliant system instead of a conventional analogue receiver.

You will also need a dish pointed at one of the satellites broadcasting digital channels (see Channel Check for details) and a universal LNB to receive the high frequencies which digital channels normally use. Digital technology typically presents higher quality pictures and sound comparable to CD quality. Also, due to the nature of compressed digital TV signals, other facilities such as electronic programme guides, audio subchannels and teletext can be offered. While every digital receiver is capable of receiving these signals, it requires both a CAM and viewing card to decrypt scrambled pay-TV channels. Some receivers feature a Common Interface to enable a number of CAMs to be inserted for viewing of a number of different digital bouquets. Digital receivers can be linked to your existing analogue system for ease of use. This can be done using either a twin-output LNB, a priority switching system or a special IF splitter. In the future, interactive services such as home shopping, educational facilities, the Internet and e-mail will also be offered – depending on the compatibility of your receiver and the broadcaster involved.

KEY: A blob in a feature column indicates that the receiver has this feature. Some adjustments are V (variable – they can take any value within a range), S (switchable – they take one of a number of discrete values) or F (fixed – they cannot be altered). Many of the column headings are the same as for the analogue receivers. The additional column headings are explained here.

COMBINED ANALOGUE: Some receivers integrate analogue and digital reception in one box. Digital features are listed under Fixed Dish Analogue Receivers

RECEIVER PRICE: Digital receivers are typically sold without a dish because it is assumed that buyers already have an antenna for analogue TV reception

DISEQC: This facility enables you to control several LNBs (or dishes) from one LNB input. It's ideal for buyers planning to watch digital channels from more than one satellite. The version indicates how many can be connected. Version 1.0 allows up to four, 1.1 allows up to eight

SCPC COMPATIBLE: Some digital channels use a whole transponder's capacity, known as Single Channel Per Carrier, and your digital receiver should ideally have this facility

CAM: The Conditional Access Module provides the crucial conditional access technology required to decode the scrambled signals broadcast by the service provider. The modular approach ensures that the cost of upgrades will be reduced and that the receiver will keep pace with advances in CA technology

NUMBER CARD SLOTS: In addition to a CAM, digital receivers require a suitable DVB viewing card to be inserted before viewing encrypted digital channels

COMMON INTERFACE: A slot that enables a Common Interface module (similar in looks to a PC card) to be inserted in some receivers. Such a slot is desirable as it enables the separation of the proprietary CA technology from the receiver

EPG: Some receivers have access to an electronic programme guide that enables the latest channel listings and programme info to be seen onscreen. EPGs are broadcast as part of the MPEG-2 signal

TELETEXT: You don't need a TV equipped with teletext to access text from digital channels. The teletext signal is broadcast within the MPEG-2 data stream. If the receiver has a text option you should be able to access it

R232 INTERFACE: Links a computer printer or other peripherals to the receiver. May not be operational; available for future services

MODEM OUTPUT: Used to attach a phone modem for accessing interactive services

OPEN TV: Interactive software used by channels in France and Germany

SCSI OUTPUT: High-speed data interface for linking a CD-Rom, CD-player and video CDs in the future

UHF TUNING RANGE: Some digital receivers do not have a UHF modulator (and therefore no tuning range) because the manufacturers consider that using UHF leads is inferior to Scart connections

Key to digital satellite PC cards

These cards can also be used for multimedia-via-satellite, which includes high-speed downloads and 'streaming' video and audio, which can be watched on a computer using appropriate media player software, as well as the ability to surf the Internet at speeds higher than a normal telephone link.

KEY: A blob in the feature column indicates that the receiver has this feature. Some adjustments are V (variable – they can take any value within a range), S (selectable – they take one of a number of discrete values), F (fixed – they cannot be altered) or A (automatic – the receiver detects the correct value). Many of the column headings are the same as for analogue and digital receivers. The additional column headings are explained here.

MAXIMUM RESOLUTION: The greatest resolution at which the card can produce a picture in a window. This is defined as a number of pixels wide, by a number of pixels high. The size this appears onscreen will depend on the resolution at which your monitor operates.

FULL SCREEN VIEWING: Most cards can stretch the maximum resolution picture to fill a larger screen, either by interpolating the missing lines or by spreading the original pixels over a block of several pixels on the monitor. Both of these methods reduce clarity at the expense of a larger picture.

INTERNET-VIA-SATELLITE: A worthwhile satellite receiver card should be compatible with consumer high speed Internet-by-satellite services such as Europe Online, unless it is intended for use with other satellite data services.

VIDEO OUTPUTS: By attaching a TV to an external analogue video output, a larger picture can be obtained from the card without the loss of clarity by expanding to the fill your computer monitor.
Also allows satellite TV programmes to be recorded on a normal VCR. PC cards will have either a composite video phono output socket, or a high quality S-video output.

INTERNAL AUDIO CONNECTOR: Connect-ing your satellite receiver card to your sound card internally is neater, offers higher quality sound, and keeps the line-in port of your soundcard free.

RECORD TO HARD DISC: Software can capture still images from TV, or record in MPEG2 to the PCs hard disc drive

MAC ADDRESSING: Individual MAC addresses are widely used to verify subscriptions to internet and multimedia-by-satellite services and address information

AV INPUTS: With composite video or S-video inputs, your satellite card can be used to watch signals from an external DVD player, VCR, or you can use a videosender to send Sky Digital from the living room to the PC in your home office.

MINIMUM PC PROCESSOR: The slowest Pentium processor recommended for reliable use, in MHz

MINIMUM PC RAM: The minimum memory capacity (in MB) for running under Windows 98, usually double under Windows 2000 and XP

DIGITAL DiSEqC 1.2 RECEIVERS

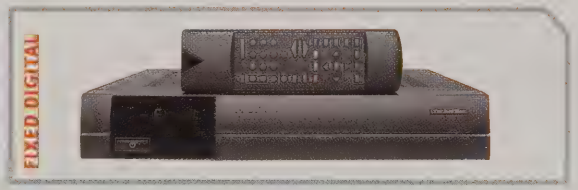
SKY PLUS £300

The ultimate Sky Digibox – at least for now – Sky Plus slickly combines an excellent Pace digital satellite receiver with a cutting edge personal video recorder. The Sky EPG and many interactive services run fast enough to be a pleasure rather than a chore, but you'll have to pay an extra £10 monthly subscription for the PVR features, as well as getting your viewing card for the BBC or Sky.



TECHNISAT TECHNIBOX CAM1 PLUS – £199

High-quality German receiver with twin Common Interface and Dolby Digital audio support. User interface is very straightforward, but flexible enough for enthusiasts' needs, while picture quality and sound quality are excellent. The UHF output isn't UK-compatible, but it would insult this receiver to use anything other than Scart.

HAUPPAUGE WinTV NEXUS-S – £199

The successor to the Win TV DVB-S offers fewer connections but enhanced performance and features. Picture quality is great and it has most features you'd expect from a standalone satellite receiver, and easy-to-use software for internet-via-satellite and streaming media services. It can also turn your PC into a PVR as it can pause live TV and make scheduled recordings. Unlike many PC TV cards, its onboard MPEG processor means it won't hog too much of the system doing it.

Key to DiSEqC 1.2 digital receivers

Many new receivers use Eutelsat's DiSEqC software system to offer a cheap and easy route to a motor-ised dish which can point at different parts of the sky. DiSEqC 1.2 receivers send signals and power along the LNB cable to an 'intelligent' motorised dish mount which is programmed with the satellite positions. Because the cable is carrying control signals and the IF satellite feed from the LNB, the power it can supply without causing interference limits dish size to one metre. However, interfaces are available for larger dishes which interpret the DiSEqC signals for a traditional motorised mount.

KEY: A blob in a feature column indicates that the receiver has this feature. Some adjustments are V (variable – they can take any value within a range), S (switchable – they take one of a number of discrete values), F (fixed – they cannot be altered), or A (automatic)

COMBINED DIGITAL: Some receivers integrate analogue and digital reception in one box. Digital features are listed under the neighbouring table

DISEQC LEVEL: Versions 1.2 provides simple positioning and movement limits. USALS enables receiver to automatically calculate satellite positions. Satscan is competing but similar technology used by Nokia

NUMBER OF SATELLITE POSITIONS: The more the better. Standard DiSEqC 1.2 allows for up to 50 positions, but this is limited by some software.

Key to motorised digital/analogue receivers

To view the programmes from more than one satellite, a motorised dish system is required. This includes a dish able to point at the different parts of the sky where the satellites are situated, and a positioner unit to control the dish motor The range of formats and standards on all the satellites is enormous, so multi-satellite systems must be flexible.

KEY: A blob in a feature column indicates that the receiver has this feature. Some adjustments are V (variable – they can take any value within a range), S (switchable – they take one of a number of discrete values) or F (fixed – they cannot be altered).

MAKE & MODEL: The models listed are all systems with integrated positioners which are capable of moving automatically to a new satellite on a channel change.

RECEIVER PRICE: The price of the receiver on its own without dish, LNB, mount and so on.

NUMBER OF SATELLITE POSITIONS: Not all receivers can pick up as many satellite positions as are needed for receiving 'everything'. The more the merrier.

EXTERNAL SWITCH OUTPUT: Programmable 5V or 12V output to trigger an external LNB switch or other equipment.

OPTICAL ACTUATOR DRIVE: Dish actuators using an optional switch for feedback require a continuous 5V supply.

ECHOSTAR DVR-7000 – £900

Not just a very flexible motorised analogue and digital receiver, but a personal video recorder and MP3 player, the DVR-7000 is the first luxury receiver we've seen in some years. It can store 4,700 channels across 100 positions, with automatic satellite locating and searching. Programme information is stored on the 40Gb hard drive, along with around 12 hours of video and hundreds of MP3 files. There's also a twin Common Interface and a Viaccess CAM to enjoy the high-quality audio-visual performance on any channel.

MANHATTAN STARLIGHT 6800 – £299

A high-end motorised receiver needs lots of features to merit the outlay, and the 6800 has them. One of most advanced, easy-to-use receivers we've come across, the 6800 has a twin CI and an integrated CAM, built-in Teletext viewer, timers, S-video and RGB outputs, and digital audio outputs. It's fully motorised for both 36V users or DiSEqC motors and has a capable auto-locating system for traditional actuators as well as the full range of DiSEqC and USALS features. There's memory for 5,000 channels and channel lists can be edited.

FORCE D-MASTER 1122S – £295

Force has always been an innovator in satellite receivers, and the D-Master 1122S is an excellent use of the DiSEqC 1.2 technology for driving smart motorised mounts. It has capacity for some 4,000 channels on 50 satellites, a twin Common Interface and both Viaccess and Conax CAMs. It's easy to use and produces fine pictures supported by strong audio, plus it even notifies you when there's a software upgrade ready to download via satellite.

YOUR GUIDE TO LOCAL CAI QUALIFIED SATELLITE INSTALLER

You've bought your new satellite and now you want to install it. Who do you go to? Look no further than your local CAI installer.
The CAI (Confederation of Aerial Industries Limited) is THE recognised trade body for the aerial and satellite industry. The CAI is committed to raising standards within the industry and whilst the criteria for membership is extremely high, the consurer is assured of A QUALITY INSTALLATION AT A FAIR PRICE.

What is so special about a member of the CAI?

* CAI Members only employ qualified personnel whose work is monitored by an inspector.
* All CAI Members are required to work to the exacting standards laid down in the CAI's Codes of Practice.
* All CAI Members guarantee their installations for a minimum of twelve months. In addition, the CAI undertakes to back-up this guarantee with its own twelve months guarantee, for domestic installations only.
* CAI Members should carry identity cards that clearly state their name and company details together with a photograph.
* All CAI Members are required to have full insurance cover. This gives the consumer total peace of mind before the work commences.
* If a customer is unhappy with any aspect of the installation, the CAI has a formal complaints procedure.

Satellite TV Engineers

Community Vision specialises in the design, installation and maintenance of communal satellite systems for residents in blocks of flats throughout Greater London.

Due to the continuing development of the company, we wish to employ two qualified Senior Engineers who will already have considerable experience in such communal installations and are now looking for the opportunity to further increase their responsibilities in this specialised area.

Nick Simpson, Director, Community Vision Ltd
Crundalls House, Matfield, Tonbridge, Kent TN12 7EA or email to: headoffice@communityvision.co.uk

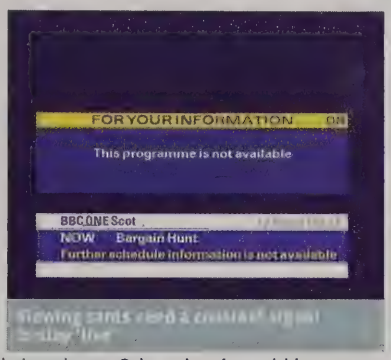
AUNTIE WANDERS OFF

I have a digital satellite receiver and a BBC free card which was working well until I returned from holiday. When I came back, BBC was off and I had to contact Sky by telephone. I contacted the BBC and they said that it had not been switched off and that they would send a new signal out, which they did. The card then worked again within the next 24 hours. Will this mean that every time I go away on holiday my card will be switched off, or is there a way to keep it on?
– BRIAN GRAHAM, BY E-MAIL



It's not clear why your card 'went off'. If you were on holiday for a long time (many weeks) and you switched off your Digibox while you were away, then the card would not receive the periodic validation (as part of the TV signal) that it requires, and it would shut down. Otherwise, it could be a glitch or fault somewhere along the line.

However, this is all somewhat academic now as, from July 14 (latest projected date at the time of going to press) the BBC is broadcasting via digital satellite in the clear.

IN SEARCH OF FTA

I want to receive the FTA channels from Astra 2, but don't want to subscribe to Sky Digital. I understand I'll need a free viewing card from the BBC to get the terrestrial channels.

I was a Sky analogue subscriber until they stopped transmitting, but I hardly watched the subscription channels and in any case my analogue receiver has now given up the ghost and isn't worth repairing/replacing.

I still have my dish installed on the back garden wall – an 80cm mesh (standard) offset dish with a Cambridge Platinum G57 Universal LNB (0.6dB) aligned on 19.2°E.

Should I be able to receive the FTA channels from Astra 2 simply by installing a Sky Digibox (with free viewing card) and swinging the dish a further 9° east (from 19.2°E to 28.2°E) to locate the Astra 2 group signals (assuming the elevation is similar)? I live in Scotland about 25 miles west of Aberdeen.

If this is feasible, can you advise me how much I should expect to pay for a Digibox? I'm inclined to go for a Pace receiver, but would welcome your advice as to manufacturer because I'm sorely tempted by the digital audio output of the Sony models. I might buy second-hand if new receivers prove to be too expensive
– JIM KELLOCK, ABERDEENSHIRE

Your old analogue dish and LNB should do just fine for receiving the Sky Digital signals from Astra 2 (and Eurobird). The dish will need to be realigned onto Astra 2 and, from Aberdeen, this means moving it about 10° east and 2.5° down. However, you will not be able to do this by eye – you will need some kind of signal strength meter to accurately locate the satellite. You could either use a meter or the onscreen signal strength display from the Digibox (although this is not very convenient).

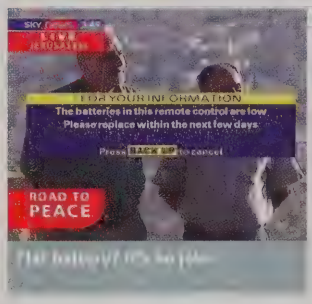
You should also adjust the skew (angle of the LNB) and check that your existing cable is up to the job. If you have problems with any of this, you can always call in a professional (for a fee).

If it is really free-to-air channels (ie unscrambled) you are after, you do not need to use a Digibox; any digital satellite receiver will do. By the end of July, the BBC (and, presumably, ITV, Channel 4 and Channel 5) intend to switch to FTA broadcast and so will be receivable with any digital satellite receiver (the cheapest, new, being about £100).

If you do want scrambled Sky Digital channels, and so need a viewing card, then you will need a Digibox. You can buy one of these new and unsubsidised for about £250, or save a considerable sum by buying a secondhand unit.

RECHARGE YOUR BATTERIES

I have a friend, Fred Scott, who persistently claims (and nobody believes him) that while watching satellite TV from his Pace Digibox, he pressed the remote control buttons numerous times and received a warning screen on his TV that his remote control batteries are running low, or words to that effect.



Can you put him out of his misery, as the only other alternative is that he dreamt it. This is not a joke
– JOHN CUTTS, BY E-MAIL

It certainly isn't a joke – this is one of the useful and under-played features of the Sky Digibox. When you use the remote control and it detects that the battery voltage is on the low side, it sends a special code to the Digibox to tell it that the handset batteries are low – so you can change them before they run out altogether, losing the TV code setting.

The handsets tend to jump the gun a bit (we've used batteries that were expected to fail any minute for many weeks) but it is nevertheless a nice feature.

APPLICATION OF FORCE

I have a Forcemaster 1122 digital receiver and the dish is directed at 19.2 °E for the German channels. I have recently experienced the problem of the picture 'freezing'. I have experienced the same with my Sky setup and it advised me to unplug the receiver for five minutes and start again. That worked with Sky, but the picture on my Force receiver keeps on freezing and is seriously getting on my nerves! Can you advise me what to do?
– BERNARD K. HAPKE, SALISBURY

Digital broadcast pictures freezing is usually caused by one of two things – a faulty receiver or sudden loss of signal. It's possible that your Force receiver has developed a fault, but it's also quite likely that something is repeatedly obstructing your dish's view of the satellite. This could be a tree that has recently grown a little too much and is being blown into the line of sight, or it could be a local squirrel or bird that likes to perch on your LNB!

INCOMPATIBLE MARRIAGES

I know that I can't use my Sky card in someone else's Digibox, but if my Digibox were to go wrong and I purchased a secondhand one that had previously been used with someone else's card, how could I get it to work with my card? Would the new installation do the trick?
– ALAN TAYLOR, IPSWICH

The installation process will only marry an unused Digibox to a fresh card. To conjoin a secondhand Digibox to your existing card you would need to phone up Sky's Customer Services. It only takes a few seconds to give them the information needed and the change is usually made within a few minutes.

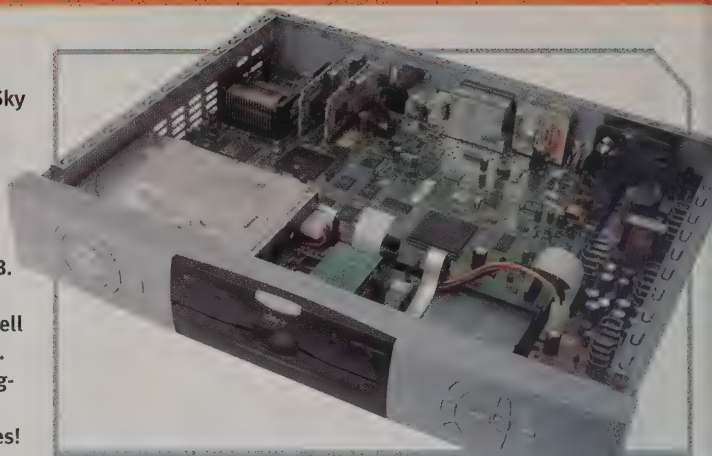
I'M BOXED IN

I read your article in the April edition regarding upgrading the hard drive in the Sky Plus box. The current hard drive in my box is a 40GB AT Maxtor D540X-4K, and I tried to obtain a suitable replacement. However, I cannot source a Maxtor Diamond Max D540X as suggested in your article.

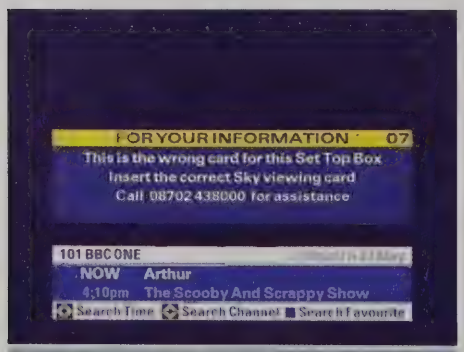
Initially, I tried a Maxtor Diamond Max Plus 9 120GB ATA/133 HDD. This has a spin-up time well within the eight seconds. It has a spin speed of 7900 and the instant pause works on Sky Plus. However, it will not record.

The suppliers have undertaken some research and suggested a Diamond Max 16 120GB. This has a spin speed of 5400 and spin-up time well within the eight seconds.

Can you make any suggestions? I don't wish to collect several hard drives!
– DAVID TUNSTALL, BY E-MAIL



Upgrading Sky Plus may still throw up some surprises



Viewing cards must be paired to the Sky Digibox being used

Maxtor D540X drives became somewhat harder to come by almost as soon as the April article was published (Sod's Law, we think, although some would see more of a conspiracy). It is still possible to get these drives if you search the online stores. However, would-be upgraders are now trying alternatives.

The DiamondMax Plus 9 (model 6Y120L0 for the 120Gb size) is an obvious choice, can be found for under £100 and most folk seem to have found this does the trick. The fact that yours does pause (which is, after all, recording and playing back the programme on the drive) but doesn't do a normal record is a little confusing. It's certainly not the spin-up time that is the problem because it's got well past that hurdle.

At least some Maxtor drives have a read verification system that checks everything written to the disc. This slows it up a lot, and with a play and two recordings going on at once (the real time pause and an attempted record) it may just be too much. The good news is that the drives are designed to only perform this verification for the first 10 times they are powered up so you can turn it off by powering down and starting up the Sky Plus 10 times (although this isn't too good for the Sky Plus power supply).

It could also be that you have a dud drive (it does happen). Get your supplier to run a full test/diagnostic on it to check out its performance. Otherwise, the DiamondMax 16 (model 4R120L0) has also been used successfully by many upgraders, so you should be OK with that too. Incidentally, we would be interested to hear from all readers who have upgraded their Sky Plus as to which drives they have found work and which do not, so we can share this information with everyone.

ANGLO-FRENCH ACCORD

My wife is French and is fond of watching the French terrestrial channels through their satellite feed via Telecom 2B (at least, I think it is 2B).

I am English and am particularly fond of Sky Digital. Our current setup is quite simple – a Sky minidish (like everyone else) and a fairly large dish (it is either 90cm or 1m) for the French channels.

We will shortly be moving house and I wondered what better possibilities I might explore.

Is it possible for me to receive both Sky Digital and the French transmissions on one dish with two LNBs? If so, is there much loss in quality and what size dish would be required (we live in the South)?

If I require two separate dishes, what size is necessary for the French transmission from Telecom 2B – the current dish looks very big and I suspect that I might have difficulty getting the required planning consent.

Would my problem be made any easier if I decided to invest in TPS (French equivalent of Sky) – could this work with one dish and two LNBs and what sort of receiver would I need?
– MARTIN MCDERMOTT, BY E-MAIL

A wide-LNB bracket is needed for Sky and Telecom 2B

Your wife is presumably watching TF1, France 2 and the like in analogue (Secam) from Atlantic Bird 3 at 5°W (the one-time position of Telecom 2B, and the only place to get these channels around this bit of the sky).

If your current 'French' dish is 90cm then you will not need planning permission for it at your new home (so long as it's not a listed building or in a conservation area). However, you do (technically) need planning permission for the second dish – the Sky minidish – although many folk quietly ignore this.

You could indeed use a single dish with a dual-feed arrangement of two LNBs to feed the two receivers. Astra 2 'needs' only a 45cm dish in the south of the UK and Atlantic Bird 3 'needs' a 75cm dish so it's likely that the 90cm dish would work for this, aimed at about 0°-5°E with the two LNBs offset to get their respective satellites.

If you have a 1m dish then this should work even better for this role but it will (again, technically) require planning permission itself.

Troubleshooter questions are answered by Malcolm Titmus of Smallworld Satellite (0121-359 8016), Martin Pickering of Satcure (see Digibox website at: www.satcure.co.uk) & the What Satellite & Digital TV editorial team. Queries cannot be answered by phone

Extra channels aren't signed on the Sky EPG

You could switch to digital reception of the French channels (from Hot Bird or Astra 1) but for this you would need to buy a digital receiver with a suitable CAM (Viaccess for the TPS broadcasts on Hot Bird or Mediaguard for Canal Satellite on Astra 1) and subscribing to the requisite service.

TERRESTRIALLY CHALLENGED

Can you please help. My terrestrial reception is rubbish – no Five, no digital, and it's very fringe. I installed a 1m steerable dish and a Strong 4375 receiver. I also have a Panasonic Digibox and a FTA card. I would like to use the Strong to position the dish to receive Sky FTA transmissions and have fitted a downfeed switch for this purpose. The system is installed and the hook-up works. The problem is the Sky screen shows 'No signal'. I don't know whether this is due to the LNB or the programming. I am unable to program or check the programming of the Strong (purchased pre-programmed) to see if it is pointing at the correct group of Astra satellites. This is because of the totally incomprehensible and poor-quality user manual supplied with the Strong.
A request to Strong has so far been ignored
– RAY DAWSON, BY E-MAIL

If the Digibox shows 'No signal' it means that either the dish is not pointed at Astra 2 and Eurobird at 28°E, or that your LNB switching connections are not right (that's assuming you are using a universal LNB on your 1m dish – the Digibox expects one).

You can easily check whether the dish is correctly pointing at 28°E by using the Strong 4375 to receive the genuinely free-to-air services there. The channels you are after (Five, BBC, ITV, etc) require a viewing card because they are not FTA broadcasts. They are scrambled but you don't need a subscription to get the card. They are known as free-to-view or (less confusingly) non-subscription channels.

However, there are FTA channels on these satellites which are not scrambled and can be received by the 4375 (or any other digital receiver) and are listed in Channel Check in What Satellite & Digital TV. If you are not getting these channels, you're not pointed at the satellite.

Just to muddy the waters further, the BBC (and Five, etc) will soon switch to free-to-air unscrambled transmission, so you will be able to watch these channels on the 4375 and dispense with the Digibox altogether. As we have mentioned elsewhere, this was reckoned to take place by July 14 at the time of writing – so they may have done so by the time you read this.

A NORTH-SOUND DIVIDE

I have a Panasonic Sky Digibox (TU-DSB20) and, after reading one of your recent articles, I attempted to find and store a regional ITV station. Using the 'add new channels' menu, I found the ones I wanted (Anglia and Yorkshire). I followed the instructions and was informed onscreen of 'Channel line-up complete'.

However, the two stations mentioned did not appear in the listings and I could not access or view them. My listings only continued to display 'ITV 1 London' as before. Any ideas? Have I neglected an important step to store channels?
– STEPHEN JOBSON, BY E-MAIL

Channels added with the 'Add new channels' procedure do not appear in the EPG. Broadcasters have to pay Sky to appear in the Sky Guide EPG and then their channels are found automatically, even if they move transponder. ITV pays to have two ITV1 channels in the EPG – your local one at 103 and a close neighbour buried at the bottom of the list.

You add non-EPG channels by pressing Services-4-4, enter the tuning parameters, select Find Channels and store the required channels from those found by flagging them with the Yellow key (it shows as a tick) then pressing Select to complete the process.

Then when watching satellite, you can only access your 'added' channels by pressing Services-8 and selecting a channel from the list of stored channels. You will get the 'now-and-next' onscreen information, but that's all. And you cannot channel-hop from an added channel to an EPG channel and back again.

CLOUDS ON MY SKYLINE

I own a Manhattan Skyline 3000 DiSEqC motor and 1m dish which I have had for eight months of trouble-free channel-searching, until now. Just before Christmas the Cryptic motor jammed and would not position properly, although I could turn it manually by using the DiSEqC.2 menu on the receiver. Even by turning the motor manually, I could still receive all the channels I wanted with good signal strength and quality.

Then I received in the post a new motor which is a different design, a Superjack DG120. Now the problems have started – I have lost many channels. I can receive Arirang on Hot Bird with a signal strength of 86 per cent, but when I turn to another channel, say 102.5 Hit Channel, I cannot get it. This problem is repeated throughout my channels from 45°E to 5°W.

I have disconnected the motor altogether, just connecting the LNB straight to the receiver, and the problem is still there. The only difference I can see is a difference in height because the new motor has the dish mount pointing down and the Cryptic motor pointing up. The difference in height is about 2ft. Would or could this small difference in height cause me to lose about 70 per cent of my channels?
– DAVID BREESE, BY E-MAIL

The change in height of the dish makes no difference at all. Usually, the cause of channel loss when a dish mount is replaced (particularly a motorised mount) is down to alignment – only the stronger signals can then be received. However, the example channels you give are on the same satellite and the same beam (and not that far off in frequency terms, either) so that's not the problem here.

However, Arirang is a horizontal polarised channel and 102.5 Hit Channel is vertical, so it may be that either your LNB is now faulty, the receiver is either faulty or not set select polarity by voltage, or possibly the cable is the problem.

Check that the receiver is set correctly and then see if you can borrow an alternative LNB to try out ■

WIN a Sony widescreen telly with GoPlayTV!

GoPlayTV, the interactive games channel from Sony, is one year old this month, and it invites you to join in the celebrations

In the past 12 months it has given away more than 6,000 prizes, grown from two games on the channel to eight – and launched a new game every week. There are guaranteed prizes for the best players every single day, and on its latest games you can even save your score. There's always a good reason to take a look at GoPlayTV!

For the birthday celebration, GoPlayTV will offer better prizes than ever before. Pay it a visit anytime in July and see what is on offer.

Just press interactive on your Sky remote control and select GoPlayTV. You'll find some of the best interactive TV games ever produced, including Wheel of Fortune, Jokers Wild (which tests your music, movie, or sports knowledge) and pick up and play games such as Q*bert, and I/O. Tetris, one of the most popular arcade games ever produced, is now exclusively available on satellite television on GoPlayTV.

To celebrate GoPlayTV's first birthday and to give yourself a feel for the type of prizes you can win on the channel, we're running a competition offering readers the chance to win a £900 Sony KV32LS355 widescreen TV and two runner-up prizes of Sony Picot DVD players. To enter, all you have to do is answer the question on the entry form and send it to us by July 22, 2003 ■

What Satellite & Digital TV competition rules
1. Entrants must be over 18 years old and resident in the EU. 2. Employees of Highbury-WV and companies supplying competition prizes are ineligible to enter. 3. Proof of posting will not be accepted as proof of delivery. No responsibility will be accepted for entries lost, damaged or delayed in the post. 4. No alternatives, cash or otherwise, will be given as prizes. 5. The winner will be notified by post. 6. The Editor's decision is final. 7. No purchase is necessary.

Answer this question, fill in your details and return the form.

PRICE POINTS

I refer to your test report of the new Panasonic Sky Digibox, the TU-DSB40, on page 27 of May's issue. I would like to know where I can buy one at the price stated of £169 (and I do not need a new dish). The best price I can find in your magazine (including advertisers' websites) is £299. Is this a rip-off by your advertisers – and where is this £169 shop?
– D T MITCHELL, MAIDSTONE

This is a difficult subject, and one which attracts regular letters and calls. The market value of Sky Digiboxes fluctuates greatly depending on the brand and model. For example, Panasonic Digiboxes are highly valued because of a strong reputation for picking up weak signals. Sony Digiboxes have now been discontinued, and the last few unused boxes were on sale for up to £600. This sounds like a rip-off, but people are willing to pay for the Sony brand and a digital audio output (even if it doesn't support Dolby Digital). You might say that some dealers are ripping people off, or you could just call it simple economics.

We'd like to quote a more accurate price, but the only reliable figure we have is the 'nominal price' quoted by Sky. You can't buy a Digibox from Sky outright, but this is the value of their subsidy to new viewers who get a free Digibox.

IN BAD TASTE

For years I have enjoyed your magazine and have found it most useful for product reviews, etc. I have also never found the need to e-mail a magazine either, until now.

I found it most distasteful that you showed an article on TV war reporters coming under fire from the censors, and a photograph of an injured child with his arms blown off (page 51), only to place an article underneath on the adult channel, which shows two lesbians and a woman with her tits out looking provocatively at the camera. If that wasn't enough, you then advertise an ad for hardcore TV on the opposite page!

Come on, guys, show some sensitivity here. Whoever agreed to place these things around such a harrowing photograph needs to show some self-censorship. Show some respect for a good article and for the little boy in the picture!
– GARY KERSHAW, BY E-MAIL

We made a mistake, and in hindsight it's obvious the article and the pictures shouldn't have been on the same page.

CROSS CHANNELS

Can you explain why Ftn, UK History, and Sky Sports News aren't free-to-air on my Sky Digibox when they are shown on Freeview? I understood Sky was part of the new Freeview service with the BBC.

I understand I can get an FTA viewing card from the BBC. If I were to get one of these cards would it allow me to view the channels mentioned? If so, could I still use my Sky card to view the channels that are on Sky, which are not on Freeview, ie TCM. I do not subscribe to Sky
– BRIAN PERRY, BY E-MAIL

It's not just these channels – the likes of TMF and UK Bright Ideas are also subscription-only on satellite, but free on digital terrestrial TV. There's no good reason for this obvious rip-off, but it shows how tightly Sky has the likes of UKTV tied up in contracts; they're simply not allowed to launch free-to-air channels on satellite, although they can launch them on Freeview.

The BBC free-to-air viewing cards for satellite won't give you access to these channels – only a Sky subscription card will do. Incidentally, TCM is free-to-air on satellite whether you have a viewing card or not, which is a good thing because it now looks very unlikely that TCM will be coming to Freeview.

OUT, DAMNED SPOT!

If, like me, you videotape the vast majority of your viewing to watch later, then Sky Digital will annoy the hell out of you, as it has me – to such an extent that I have cancelled my subscription and gone over to NTL.

Why does it annoy? That bloody intrusive red spot on the Sky channels, Channel 4, E4, and the UKTV channels. I know it is there for the interactive sections on Sky, but if you ask anyone with Sky how to access interactive, they will tell you: 'Press the red button', without the need to be patronised by Sky putting that red spot there. If you press Backup it goes, but it comes back after the next commercial break, which means all video recordings will have this drawing your attention to it. It has to be the worst colour to have on your TV screen – surely the yellow button would have been less intrusive.

Even though Sky has gone for quantity not quality in its channel line-up, putting on channels that no one will ever watch – and putting up the subscription rate – I could have put up with this to watch the channels I like. I can't even watch my favourite shows now without getting angry at that bloody red spot, so Sky has lost my custom until such time as it gets rid of it – especially as cable shows the channels I like without an interactive spot on the screen!

GOON-SILLY

Now that Goonhilly earth station has been awarded Grade II listed status will it be prevented from attaching a dish to the front of the building?
